Memorial Day Sale

The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers .10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We go the distance for you."

KING-KONG MAKING A LEFT ONTO THE MONTAUX HIGHWAY

Public Hanging Planned

Highway Official Who Ordered Construction Over Memorial Day May Have Fled

By Dan Rattiner

The last public hanging in the Hamptons took place in the 1840s in Sag Harbor. A native of Ceylon, brought back as a cook aboard one of Sag Harbor's whaling ships, went on a rampage and killed three shipmates one night while the ship was in harbor at Long Wharf.

No one knows where the wooden scaffolding used in that hanging is today, but the historical societies of both Southampton and East Hampton Town are reportedly looking for it. It is expected that sometime next week, if all goes well, a certain bureaucrat in the New York State Department of Transportation will be brought to justice.

So far, however, just who that bureaucrat is remains undetermined. Inquiries of whose idea it was to begin these vast highway improvement projects in both these towns just one week before Memorial Day weekend merely lead to shrugs of wintertime, we can all understand that it is too cold and the ground too hard to do all that jackhammering and digging with the bulldozers and steamshovels. But the end of March is a good time. And the beginning of November is a good time. The work can usually be done in a week or two, a month at most, and then we get on with our lives.

The end of autumn, and the beginning of springtime are also excellent times in these parts for all the local Village Improvement Societies to be out working, and this year was no exception. Lots of seeding was done last fall in Agawam Park in Southampton, huge displays of flowers were put in place this past spring in the triangle at the corner of Route

Now, however, the major intersections of our villages... are torn apart with piles of dirt, huge lengths of black drainage pipes, caterpillar backhoes...

ignorance or finger pointing off in some direction that leads nowhere.

Spring and fall are good times to fix the highways out here in the Hamptons. In the South O' the Highway (and North, too)

The launch party thrown by London Jewelers last Saturday night for our new South of the Highway magazine was a terrific success. About 300 attended and our publisher and editor Dan Rattiner showed up in a tuxedo. Perhaps the highlight of the evening however was the fashion show offered up by Betsey Johnson and her crew. Way to go, girl.

Some people may recall seeing two time academy award winner Barbara Kopple (Harlan County, U. S. A.; American Dream) out here in February shooting footage for one of her famous documentaries. That footage ran about 25 minutes and was proposed to ABC as a series. Now word has come down that the project has been purchased and a Kopple's signature documentary about the East End and the Hamptons will be shown on ABC as a four hour mini-series on two consecutive nights next spring. Meanwhile, she and her crew are out here all summer rolling the cameras. Look for them, and when you see them, smile.

Christie Brinkley will host the STAR foundation's informational meeting - about the effects of having nuclear power plants in our midst - at Duck Walk Vineyards in Water Mill on June 12.

East Hampton's Puffy Combs, who now says that his announced plan to change his name to "P. Diddy" was just a joke on the media, is now rushing to be the first to write a biography - about himself. His rival is one Peter Noel, a reporter for the Village Voice, who has titled his book That's Gangsta. A spokesman for Combs says Noel, named after the holiday, knows almost nothing about him. So they'll be two books out. One by Noel. One by a woman who calls herself dream hampton - no capital letters please. All this is hot stuff.

Other magazines hire models, drape them with fashion and jewelry, take pictures of them, and then in small print describe the goods worn, how much they cost and where you can get them. Dan's Papers' Cat Squires, who took on this challenge for our new weekly South of the Highway magazine, turned this project on its head. Next week, the magazine will publish the first of these shoots featuring, not models, but actors and celebrities. Look for some of the cast of The Sopranos, who came out here by limo to be photographed reading to school children in a school library setting. Yes, and you can buy what they wore in our stores. You get that, fella?

Hunt Slonem, Vered Gallery's neo-naturalist painter whose work hangs in more than 70 museums and private collectors like East Enders Donna Karan and Liz Smith, is opening his Vered Gallery exhibition birdtalk with a reception for the artist on Friday, June 1.

114 and Highway Behind the Lots in East Hampton.

In fact, all through the Hamptons, the planting and gardening went on as it always does — look at the display at the corner of Wood's Lane and Main Street in East Hampton — because we are all proud of our towns, beautiful old villages, built in colonial times along the New England model, but featuring nearly a dozen wooden windmills dotting the landscape from Shinnecock to Gardiner's Island, and we want to show them off to our summer visitors and put forward our best.

Now, however, the major intersections of our villages — have you noticed the wonderful display of fountain grass and palm at the corner of County Road 39 and Hamptons Road? — are torn apart with piles of dirt, huge lengths of black drainage pipes, caterpillar backhoes and orange and black rubber traffic cones.

And of course, the traffic must be rerouted. There was a record one at the corner of Route 114 and Main Street in East Hampton last Friday. Practically the entire main artery through town was shut down and there were men with red flags and big yellow signs indicating the detours that would have to be taken so people could go to wherever it was they had no intention of going.

At first, it was thought it must be one of the local highway departments doing this. But that couldn't be. We all know each other. Why in the world would anybody order this work to commence two days before the start of summer? It would be like — they're having this Broadway show opening and the afternoon of opening night a twenty man painting crew comes in to announce the start of a two week project to repaint the interior of the theatre. No. It had to be the State Highway people.

Who the hell is the man up in Albany who ordered this? We'll find him. It will never happen again. •

Thiele Says EPA Misrepresented Locals On Superfund Cleanup

Assemblyman Fred Thiele claims the Environmental Protection Agency has misrepresented the position of the Village of Sag Harbor and the Southampton Town Trustees in regard to remediating the contaminated plume of water moving westward from the Rowe Industries Superfund site. Thiele also claims that the EPA excluded him from discussions about the cleanup because of his views opposing the direct discharge of treated water into Ligonee Brook and his advocacy of the residents along the plume in their legal battles against Nabisco, which now owns the factory and is responsible for the cleanup.

In letters to Christine Todd Whitman, Administrator of the EPA and Randy A. Daniels, New York State Secretary of State, Thiele detailed his dissatisfactions.

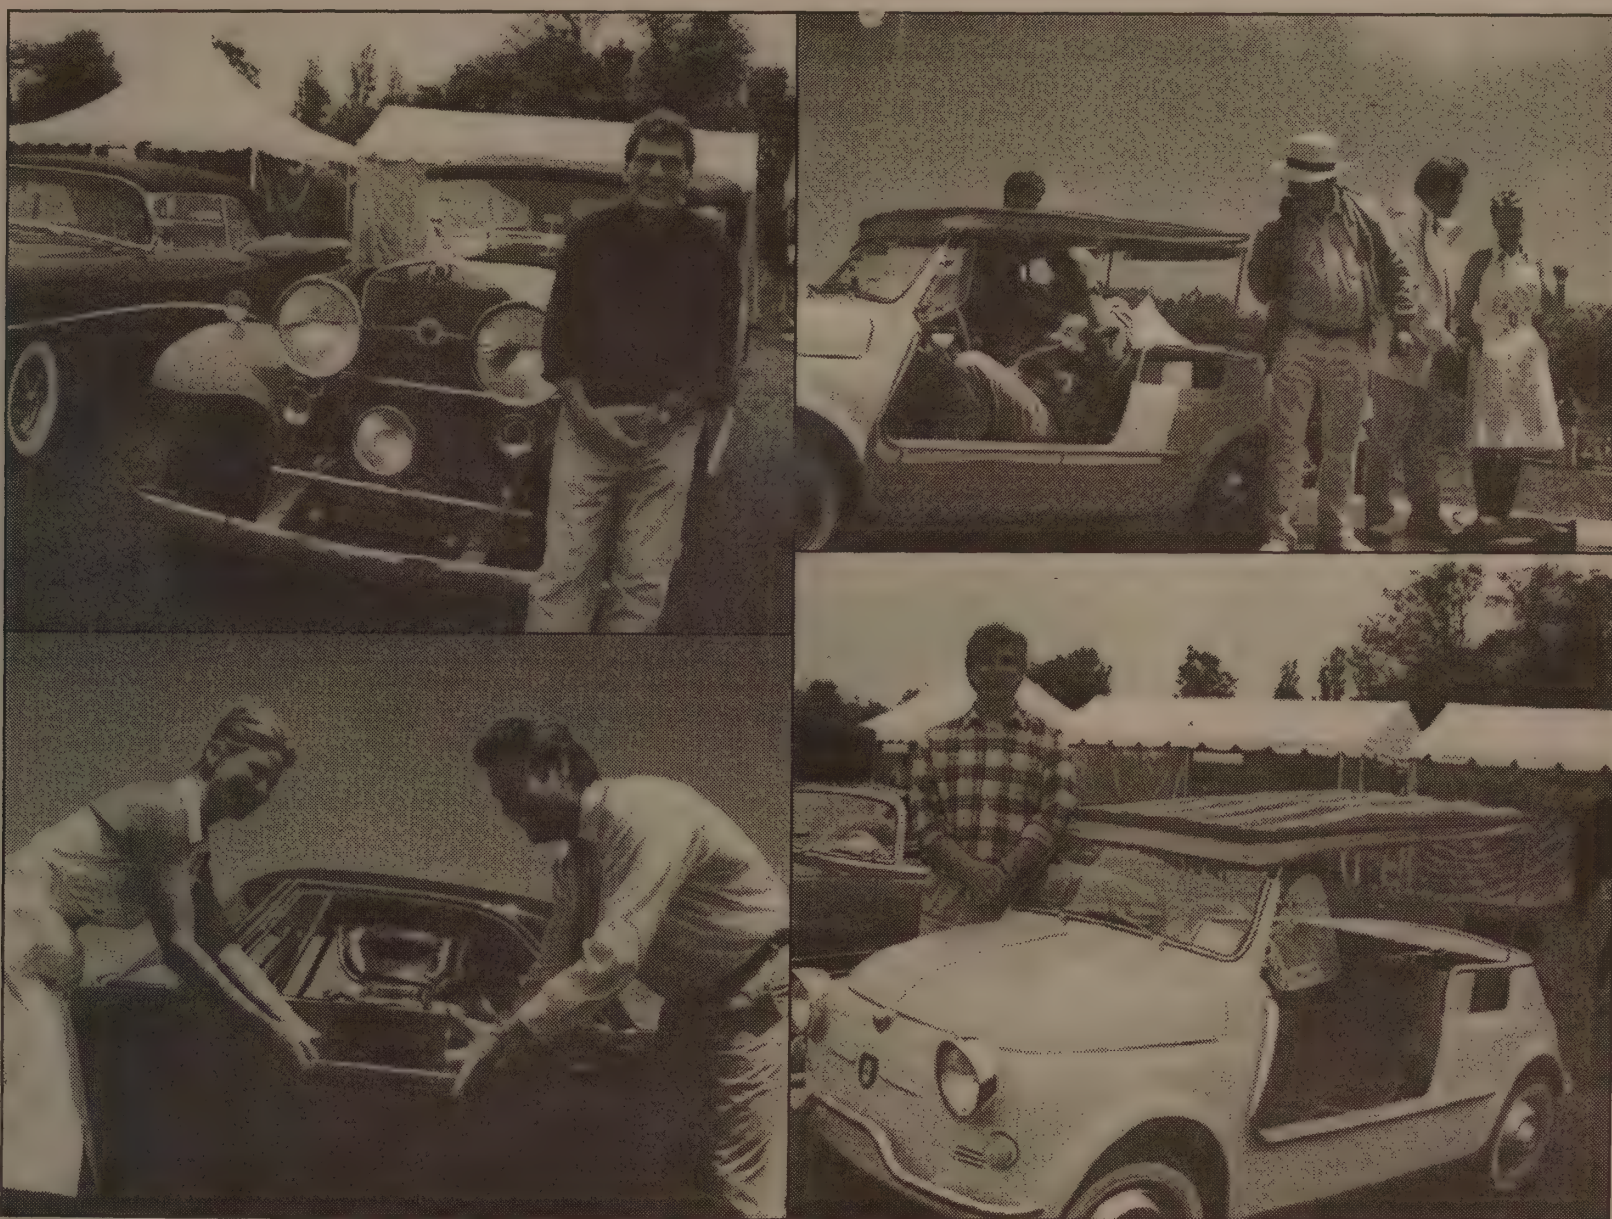

"I also live in Sag Harbor and grew up in a house less than a mile from this site, although not within the plume of pollution. I must protest in the strongest possible terms both the selected remedy and the unprofessional behavior of your agency regarding this matter."

The proposal in question would have the polluted water in the plume to be stripped of its contaminants and that water then discharged into Ligonee Brook. Many residents and local officials worry that this unnatural increase of water in the brook would cause severe damage to the environment of the brook.

To both Daniels and Whitman he pointed out that "the Peconic Bay Estuary has been designated as one of 28 estuaries of national significance under the National Estuary Program pursuant to the federal Clean Water Act." The estuary had been so designated by the EPA. Thiele said that for the EPA to support any discharge, however remediated, from Rowe into these waters, would

Car Auction

The Car Joe DiMaggio Gave His Handyman And Other Bridgehampton Fables

By Dan Rattiner

One of the more elegant events held over Memorial Day weekend was, not surprisingly, the aptly named Concours d'Elegance, held on Sunday morning inside a giant white tent in Bridgehampton. Directly outside this tent was a collection of about seventy antique automobiles, on display by their owners for the enjoyment of whoever wanted to walk amongst them.

At noon, inside the tent, a band began to play, the waiters began to bring out the food and there was a most wonderful luncheon for the guests — there must have been 200 of them — who were there to see these cars, eat, drink and dance on a wooden dance floor and otherwise enjoy themselves and at the same time benefit the American Cancer Society, Long Island Chapter. There was also a runway show of fashion models in the very latest designs from Jimmy's of Westhampton Beach, and a series of awards given out to the owners of these cars, for example, most accurate restoration, the best car chosen by the guests by ballot and, one that I had been asked to give out, which was entitled "the best story I have heard this morning."

Christie Brinkley and Alexa Joel

Specifically, what I was asked to do, and did, was walk around amongst all these old cars — Ferraris and Porsches and pre-war Cadillacs and Austin Healeys and so forth — and introduce myself as editor of this newspaper to the various car owners and then ask them to tell me "the best story I heard this morning."

One of the best was told to me by Kevin Bodkin of Sag Harbor, who was polishing up a beautiful white 1941 Cadillac sedan with whitewall tires.

"This was my dad's car," he said. "He's since passed away, but I keep it up. Dad was a handyman for Joe DiMaggio when Joe lived in the Bronx in the early 1950s. At one point, Joe, who owned this car, had an argument in it with one of his wives — I never did learn which one — and after that argument he said he would never drive in that car again. About eight years later, Joe moved away, and he told my dad he had been a good handyman and if there was anything he could do for him just let him know. Dad asked if he could have this old rusty Cadillac that was just sitting in the garage — it was almost 20 years old at that time — and Joe said sure. And so that is how dad got this car."

I heard a wonderful story about a car from Peter Greenfield of Freeport and Bridgehampton. He was there with his incredible 1931 black Cadillac convertible, that he said he had driven all the way out from his Freeport home for this show.

"Do you recall that for several years there was this wonderful full size bronze statue of a man in a racing car on the lawn of the Bridgehampton Library?"

I told him that I did. Bridgehampton has long been home to a world class sports car racing community. The statue had been made in Italy — it showed the legendary car driver Tazio Nuvolari at the wheel of a 1930 Alfa — and it had been shipped to Bridgehampton by a racing enthusiast who had it on display there.

"Well, two years ago, I went into New York to buy this beautiful bronze statue," Greenfield said. "It was no longer in Bridgehampton. It was at the Waldorf Astoria, and they were having a weekend auction of antique cars and the statue was included in it. I went in to buy the statue, and I bid successfully for it. I own it today. But I also bought this wonderful Cadillac convertible. Hadn't intended to. But I'm a collector. And I fell in love with it."

"In 1929, Cadillac made what was probably the most expensive car in America, and possibly the world. It had a V16 engine and sold for what must have been the equivalent of a hundred thousand dollars today new. Then the crash came. And here in 1931, they made this poor man's Cadillac convertible, which is what this is. It is a poor man's Cadillac because they replaced the expensive V16 engine with a more moderately priced V12."

Another story was told to me by David Weir, who was displaying a 1961 Alfa Romeo at the show.

"Does the story have to be about this car?" he asked me.

I told him it didn't.

"Well, I can tell you about a car I bought in South America that I never got. I was a few years out of college at the time — I had gone to the University of France and had visited England and liked it and so had moved there — I had a racing car garage in Belgravia — and I had gone off on the racing circuit. I really saw myself as a very romantic race car figure and I guess I was. I finished 4th at LeMans in 1971. And that year I won a 1000 kilometer race in Buenos Aires driving a 1971 Temperada. Anyway, in Buenos Aires someone told me that there was this very famous 1954 Ferrari for sale. It had been driven by the well known Argentine driver Froilan Gonzales, and he, together with the Englishman Maurice Trintignant, had won the 24 Hours at LeMans in it. The car was celebrated in Argentina. But now it was for sale. And not that expensive at all. I went to where it was, paid the money, got the keys, and then never got the car. The government of Argentina would not let it out of the country because it was considered a national treasure.

"Well I went back to London and hired some lawyers and six years went by and I just forgot about it. Then a lawyer called up and said if I wanted the car they could arrange for me to have it but I'd have to buy it a second time and this time at six times the price and I said I'd take a pass.

"Then one day, about ten years after that, I got a call from Ed Jurist, who owned a vintage car store in Nyack. He said the car was in America. He asked me to come up and have dinner with him. I did, and had dinner not only with him but also with Maurice Trintignant who was there, but I never did see the car. They told me that it had been sold and exported by somebody else. It was a long story. But it seemed the government had decided that the car was no longer a national treasure but Froilan Gonzales was the national treasure, and so now it was HE who could not

"It's Been A PLEASURE Serving You," The ATM Machine Said

By Dan Rattiner

The Hess Gas Station between East Hampton and Bridgehampton has installed an ATM Machine. It's to the right of the checkout counter, next to the Slurpie Machine and right up against the wall and you will miss it unless one of the checkout people point it out to you.

It's not much to look at. It's gun metal grey and black and not much bigger than a small stove so it is possible, if you were very big and very strong, to pick it up and take it with you when you left. You'd have to be brandishing a gun when you did this, of course: There's all that money inside.

Anyway, it was at two o'clock in the morning last Tuesday, after a long 18 hour shift at my office in Bridgehampton, that I wearily locked up and headed down the Montauk Highway in my car toward East Hampton and home. There was nobody about at that hour. It was chilly and dark. And it made me feel a little nervous.

Thirsty, I pulled into the Hess Station, the only business establishment open within six miles, got a Coca Cola, and noticed that when I went to pay the attendant, I was down to my last four dollars.

This was not good. Inquiring, the attendant told me about the ATM, and so I went over to it, saw it for the first time, swiped my card, then followed the instructions on the screen.

Whatever I chose to do, the machine told me,

IT'S BEEN A PLEASURE TO SERVE YOU, it said.

I was so startled by this. Here I was, the middle of a dark night, tired, dirty and unshaven, and the machine was telling me what a pleasure it had been to serve me. A Republican, yes. But with class.

I folded the money into my wallet and looked up, but now the message was gone. The machine was looking forward to its next customer. Whatever pleasure it had felt was momentary.

I got into my car and headed out, and in spite of myself, began thinking about this little unpretentious ATM machine and what it had said. It put me in mind of the little R2D2 in Starwars - the ATM was not much bigger than R2D2 - and how excited R2D2 got whenever anybody it liked came over, jiggling from side to side in happiness.

By contrast, the ATM machine had MANNERS. It had taken pleasure in our transaction. And it had told me so.

Per dollar, they charge more if you are poor than if you are rich. Must be a Republican, I thought.

there was going to be a $1.50 surcharge. If I took out $100 it would charge me $1.50. If I took out $400 it would charge me $1.50. This was not very fair, I thought. Per dollar, they charge more if you are poor than if you are rich. Must be a Republican, I thought.

I finished my transaction. The machine flashed one final message on its screen.

As I passed Town Pond, I took a few sips of Coca Cola and thought more about this transaction. What sort of pleasure, however fleeting, had this ATM taken? What brings pleasure to an ATM?

Had my little $1.50 entered its innards and brought the ATM machine over some prescribed threshold of accomplishment? Had it, perhaps, won a prize?

Maybe now, with this last $1.50, it could shut down and go off duty for awhile as a prize. Or perhaps it won a trip somewhere, to Disneyworld for example, to see the sights. I'm thinking the ATM on Space Mountain. Or maybe it's somewhere else, just down to the beach for awhile. What machine, dropped off by a forklift from a truck on the Montauk Highway, had ever seen the surf and the sea at what is perhaps the most beautiful ocean strand in America? Not many, that is for sure. Maybe the ATM was just feeling pleased with itself because it had a little bit of spending money in its pocket. I know I did. Now I could buy things. Maybe now the ATM could buy things. A pair of dress shoes perhaps.

I've used plenty of machines in my time. They say PLEASE TAKE YOUR CASH or PRESS EXIT KEY TO COMPLETE YOUR TRANSACTION. They never say IT HAS BEEN A PLEASURE TO SERVE YOU. Never.

I thought briefly of turning the car around and going back to the Hess Station for another go round with the ATM, but then thought better of it. I have a daily limit at the ATM every day. Perhaps I had exceeded it. And so I continued in the direction I was headed.

But now I know where that ATM is. I can visit anytime, and he'll be there, 24 hours a day, this bright, Republican, well-mannered young ATM machine. He'll be there, anyway, unless he is off at Disneyland enjoying his prize. And then I could come back later to see him. What stories he'll have to tell.

Potato Run

Man From Kazakhstan Sets New Record Winning The Dan's Papers Potatohampton 10K

By Dan Rattiner

The 23rd running of the annual Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon was held last Saturday morning. Runners assembled in the meetinghouse behind the Bridgehampton Presbyterian Church beginning about 8 a.m. as they always do, signing in, talking about races past, doing stretches and bends, and observing with a certain amazement the very formidable array of free gifts and services for the racers.

There was not one gift bag for each participant, but two, one from Time Inc., the other from Self magazine. There were also copies of Self magazine, Time magazine, and Dan's Papers, posters and beverages, bananas and oranges, lotions and power bars, t-shirts and gift coupons. People were happy to receive these things, and there were many runners who took them and then hid them in cabinets inside the meetinghouse so that when the race was over, there would be all of what they collected. Others just handed them to friends and family attending the event, there for encouragement, to cheer on the participants and see to them again when the race was done.

This 10K race, older than any other continuously held race on Long Island, had its start this year on Ocean Road, about halfway between the War Memorial Obelisk on the Montauk Highway and the old Beebe Windmill off Ocean Road. The runners, about 400 of them, faced south, away from town and toward the beach, and at the sound of an airhorn, headed out with a great cheer on a run through the potatoes.

Well, it's not entirely through the potatoes anymore. What with development and the passage of time, about half of the route is now beautiful homes with mowed lawns and gardens, about a quarter of it is horse farms and the remaining quarter, still, is planted in potatoes. It is still all very beautiful, however.

Three of them were tall, handsome, youthful men with long strides. The fourth man, however, did not fit in.

Very quickly into the start of this race, about a dozen runners, mostly men in their twenties and thirties, moved off into the front, and, as they came around the turn onto Sagg Street, began jockeying for position, some briefly taking the lead, others drafting behind. It was a cool, damp morning, temperature about sixty degrees, really a very perfect day for a race, and there had been some talk about very fast times. The day would not disappoint.

This writer had the good fortune to be watching all of this in the rear view mirror, because as the founder of the race, I get to drive the pace car through the very complicated and twisty course that it takes. I was in a bright red convertible, provided by the race promoting firm led by Linda Shapiro that now organizes the event, and behind me were two photographers, both with long lens cameras, clicking away in the back seat. One of them was a man I did not know. The other was Natasha Udensiva, a friend of mine out for the weekend, whose husband Mischa was running in the race, but was already well back in the pack.

We rounded the turn onto Highland Avenue and I checked the roadmap spread out on my lap. I was on course — one year I was off course, more about which later — and some of the lead men had fallen off the pace. In fact, behind us, we could now see just four men vying for the lead. Three of them were tall, handsome, youthful men with long strides. The fourth man, however, didn't fit in. He was short and awkward, not at all graceful, and, older, he kept himself chugging along with the leaders by bouncing from side to side as he ran, his arms all elbows sticking out akimbo. He had a white sailor hat plopped upside down on his head. He would not, I predicted to the photographers, last long with the leaders.

I was wrong.

As the race went on, one by one, the other, taller, younger men dropped away. Soon, at the halfway mark, there was only one staying with the older man. This, I later learned, after they crossed the finish line, was Rusty Barry of East Hampton, a well known runner in these parts. But now at the halfway point, Barry was struggling. And as we came down Ocean Road again, further down toward the beach, this strange looking older man kept testing him, pulling away a bit, forcing Barry to put on a burst of speed to keep back up.

This race has never been about setting world records or even regional ones. It is a good way to get started on the long Memorial Day weekend, getting up at 7 a.m. Saturday after driving out from the city on Friday night or finishing a work week and getting to bed early to spend the morning conditioning yourself for the weekend crowds.

Usually, the winner of the 10k Potatohampton completes it in 32 or 33 minutes. The world record is somewhere around 29 minutes. Our winners come from the New York City Track Club, or some other running club nearer by.

But now I remembered something.

"I think something important is going on," I told the photographers in the back. "You never know who is going to be coming out on a Memorial Day weekend in the Hamptons. One time, I remember, we had a member of the French Olympic team. He ran the race in a record time. I think it was 31 minutes something. That record still stands. Maybe this guy is somebody at that level. I don't know him."

"I don't know this guy either," the photographer in the back said.

"He looks to be in his forties," Natasha said.

"Maybe even fifties," I said.

Coming along Mecox Road, this older man tested Barry again, and this time began to pull away. By the time they were on Paul's Lane, at the three mile mark, Barry was a hundred yards behind. By the time we had turned onto Halsey Lane, Barry was so far behind he was nowhere in sight.

"You can tell him how far ahead he is," I shouted back to Natasha, as we moved up Halsey. "He'd probably appreciate hearing that."

Neither Natasha or the other photographer had ever been in the lead car with me before. They looked at me surprised. It hadn't occurred to them, in the few times that he had pulled up almost even with our lead car, that they could talk to him.

And so, Natasha yelled exactly that at the lead runner. He made no response.

"I don't think he speaks English," Natasha said.

On the home stretch, coming up Ocean Road toward the finish line, it is possible to see the big electric timer clicking off the seconds from a considerable distance away. I saw it. Didn't believe it. It was 29 minutes, turning to 30. Something quite astonishing was going on indeed.

Our strange awkward older man came chugging up Ocean Road behind us, and as we came through under the big banner of the finish, he followed us through just after the timer had turned 31. His official time, 31 minutes and 12 seconds. You could look back down the road almost a quarter mile. Nobody else was even in sight. He'd just run the Dan's Papers Potatohampton faster than anyone ever had before.

At the finish line, the crowds swarmed around this lone runner, smiling and talking to him, asking him who he was and so forth and so on. I pulled the car off to the side, jumped out, and with Natasha following behind, ran over. She was right. He was grinning and nodding at everybody but he wasn't saying a thing. He could not understand a word of what anybody was saying.

But then he did say something. And Natasha let out a yip.

"He's Russian!" she said. And, at my urging and the urging of some reporters, we got her to talk to him and figure out who he was and what he was all about.

"He's from Kazakhstan," Natasha announced. The man grinned and nodded at everybody.

"Where is that?" somebody asked.

Quickly it all came out. Sergei Polirarov is a member of the Kazakhstan National Track Team, here on the East End, staying with friends, preparing for the New York City Marathon six months from now. In Riverhead, where he stays, he read about this event. He thought he would enter it. As for Kazakhstan, it is a country, formerly a part of the Soviet Union, near Afghanistan.

At this point, the second and third place runners, laughing and high fiving each other, came right past where we were standing, which was about twenty yards down from the finish line. These two were Craig Gates of Sag Harbor and Kevin Barry, who coaches the East Hampton High School track team and who had faded to third. Both their times

The Bugged Meeting

Mayor Giuliani And Raoul Felder In Gracie Mansion Discussing Impotence Strategy

By Dan Rattiner

So Mayor Giuliani held a press conference last week at which time he announced his undying love for his girlfriend Judy Nathan. His wife of twenty-three years, the first lady of the City of New York, could go to hell. It was Judy Nathan, even though he was now impotent, who had nursed him through the trying times of the last year and a half. She was the one who deserved the gold medal.

So here it is, two days before the speech and the mayor is pacing around his office in Gracie Mansion discussing the most important issue of the day with his most trusted advisor.

"We've got to come up with something," divorce lawyer Raoul Felder says. "Donna is winning the war of words. Public opinion is swaying to her side."

"I can't stand this." The mayor says.

"What are you talking about? Divorce? It's nothing. I do it all the time."

"I'm sick, and she goes off and says she's going to perform in The Vagina Monologues. I mean that's really sick."

"You can't say vagina in front of news cameras," Felder says. "It gets on television."

"They say the name of that character, what's his name, Big Pussy on The Sopranos."

"That's cable; I'm talking network news. You know the law."

"Well then I don't know what to do," the Mayor says.

"Oh come on Rudy, you're being a pussy."

"You can't say that."

"This is the mayor's office, not network television. I'm talking to you, the crime fighter, the tough guy, and the strongest mayor we've ever had. The mayor with the big balls. Look she's going to talk about Nathan, the mistress, the paramour, the home-wrecker."

"She's not my mistress. We're not lovers."

"Oh come on Rudy, you don't have to lie to me. This isn't like murder where if you tell me you did it I have to tell the judge because I'm ethically bound. This is divorce."

"I'm telling you the truth. It's a side effect of the treatment I'm getting."

Raoul Felder goes over and stares out the window. Some school children are playing on the Gracie Mansion lawn.

"Some people get it," he says.

"She's been there this whole time," the mayor says. "Unwavering, my companion, my nurse, my friend, my blood brother. That's what kind of woman she is. She's no mistress. She can't call her that and get away with it."

Felder turns and stares at the mayor. He strokes his chin.

"Can you get a note from your doctor?" he asks.●

$8,000 OUT, $300 IN, $7,700 TO GO

By Dan Rattiner

So the President announced a tax cut last week. Within the next three months, every taxpayer in America is to receive a rebate of $300. If you're two taxpayers and you're married, it's $600. Here's the way I look at it. Let's do the math.

One year ago, the Dow was at 13,000 and NASDAQ was at 3,000. These numbers represented the average value of certain key stocks on Wall Street and provided a good measure of the total value of the stocks owned by American citizens on that date. The total was $22 trillion dollars, or about $44,000 for every taxpayer. (some of them owned more, some of them less, some a lot more.)

Yesterday, after sinking to 8,000, the Dow came back to about 11,000 while the NASDAQ was stuck at 2,000. In other words, what was once valued at $22 trillion dollars is now $18 trillion dollars. So the average American taxpayer, of which there are 50 million, expressing his faith in the American way of life, has lost in the last twelve months, if my mathematics is correct, $8,000. Or if it's two taxpayers that are married, $16,000.

I'm told the number of pages of these new tax law document totals around 1,800. And certainly, it costs a lot of money for a bunch of lawyers and bureaucrats and congressmen and lobbyist and aides and diplomats to write all the words on these 1,800 pages.

And so I'm happy that maybe the idea was to cover an $8,000 loss. But in the end, what we get back is just $300. $8,000 out and $300 back in leaves $7,700 to go.

Still it's a start. My hat is off to them. ●

Obituary: Victor Kiam

By Jerry Cimisi

Victor Kiam, the man who bought Remington because he liked the razor, grew up in New Orleans, on Napoleon Avenue, where a streetcar named Desire stopped. His great-grandmother had lived through the Civil War. His grandfather would take young Victor fishing in the bayous.

Victor's parents divorced when he was five. His father had suffered in the Wall Street crash of 1927. He made a permanent move to New York, while the boy's mother went to Hollywood to try to become an actress.

When Victor eleven, his mother also moved to New York, seeking work on Broadway. Victor too came to New York, and alternated living between his two parents.

Kiam went to Dalton and then to Andover. During WWII he served with the Navy in the North Atlantic. After the war he attended Yale, earning a Bachelor of Arts degree in Economics.

In the late '40s Kiam spent a Bohemian period in Paris, embracing existentialism and wearing the avant garde uniform of the day, a beard and a beret. He was an extra in a movie, The Man on the Eiffel Tower, which starred Charles Laughton.

In France, Kiam hit on the idea of chauffeuring tourists about Europe, eventually building a small company, European Touring Service Limited, providing a fleet of six cars driven by multi-lingual Sorbonne students.

But Kiam's free if entrepreneurial life was interrupted by his father, who had sent in an application for his son to the Harvard Business School, signing Victor's name. Victor had been accepted.

Reluctantly Victor returned to the States, graduated from Harvard and, expressing an interest in foreign trade, took a job with Lever Brothers. He then went to Playtex, where he became director of marketing. On a European vacation with his new wife Ellen, Kiam became involved in a jewelry export business which became the second largest importer of Italian jewelry to the U.S.

Meanwhile, Kiam had risen to Executive Vice President of Marketing with Playtex, then resigned after a takeover. He then took control of the Benrus Watch Company. He would leave the company and build a global business importing jewelry and artifacts and China. This was after Nixon's historic visit there in 1972.

Then came his purchase of Remington. He was considering the deal and his wife asked him why he would want to buy the company as he had never used an electric razor. He replied that he had been with Playtex for fifteen years and had never worn a bra.

Kiam tried a Remington, loved it, and bought the company. He appeared in its ads. When Kiam took over Remington it had 428 employees and a 19 percent share of the market. The company grew to 2,500 employees and a 43 percent share. It would be listed in the One Hundred Best Companies to Work for in America.

In accepting an award from the Northwood Institute for his entrepreneurial achievements, Kiam jokingly detailed his wife's reaction to the Remington commercials. Kiam, at the request of the ad agency, did the first commercials in a bathrobe. But, he never wore a bathrobe. And Kiam said he found out that the majority of American men did not wear a bathrobe when they shaved. He said he took a continual ribbing from his wife about the bathrobe. So he made a commercial bare chested - well, almost: he had a towel draped over one shoulder. When his wife saw the commercial she made no comment at first, then told him no one would buy a razor from a guy whose body looked like that.

In the acceptance speech, Kiam quoted an exchange from the story of Cyrano de Bergerac. "The Comte de Guish, referring to Don Quixote, reminds Cyrano that windmills, if you fight with them, will swing around their long arms and cast you down into the mire, and Sarahnor, the eternal entrepreneur, replied, 'Or up among the stars.'"

Victor Kiam was 74 when he passed away. He had homes in Manhattan, the Hamptons and Palm Beach.

By Dan Rattiner

In recent years I've interviewed almost all the so-called "celebrities" that now make this place home. I thought to run some of them this summer. As they are largely mini-biographies, they are timeless. I hope you enjoy them. The date of the interview appears at the beginning of the biography. An update appears at the end. The changes in people's lives, as demonstrated by this interview with Robert F.X. Sillerman, are sometimes remarkable.

AUGUST 21, 1992

I am sitting with Robert F.X. Sillerman in the living room of his home on Meadow Lane in Southampton and he is telling me about his childhood. Born and raised in Riverdale — father in the broadcasting business — big business reversal — he moved down to the West Side when he was fifteen.

"I went to Collegiate, the Manhattan prep school. Because my dad was having financial problems, I needed to get a job. I looked at the school bulletin board, filled with jobs offered and kids looking for jobs and I thought, maybe there's a job here hooking these two groups up. I created a clearing house. Took a little percentage. Advertised. I was amazed. Hundreds of kids responded. So we put up fliers in Dalton and Brearsley and we expanded it, but I really worried that I wouldn't be able to get everybody jobs.

"Then a friend of mine who was in college told me he could get me a subscription to Life magazine cheap. Time/Life was interested in the youth market and they had people all over the college campuses selling magazine subscriptions at a very high discount because they figured if they could start them young they could keep them. All my friend wanted was to help me if I wanted this special offer because I was a high school kid and not yet eligible, but I saw it differently. Here was how I could get everybody on my list employed. I went down to Time Life, spoke to them, and pretty soon we had all these high school kids out at their schools selling discount magazine subscriptions. Everybody Was happy."

As Bob Sillerman is not in the employment agency business today, I asked him what finally happened to this business he started in high school.

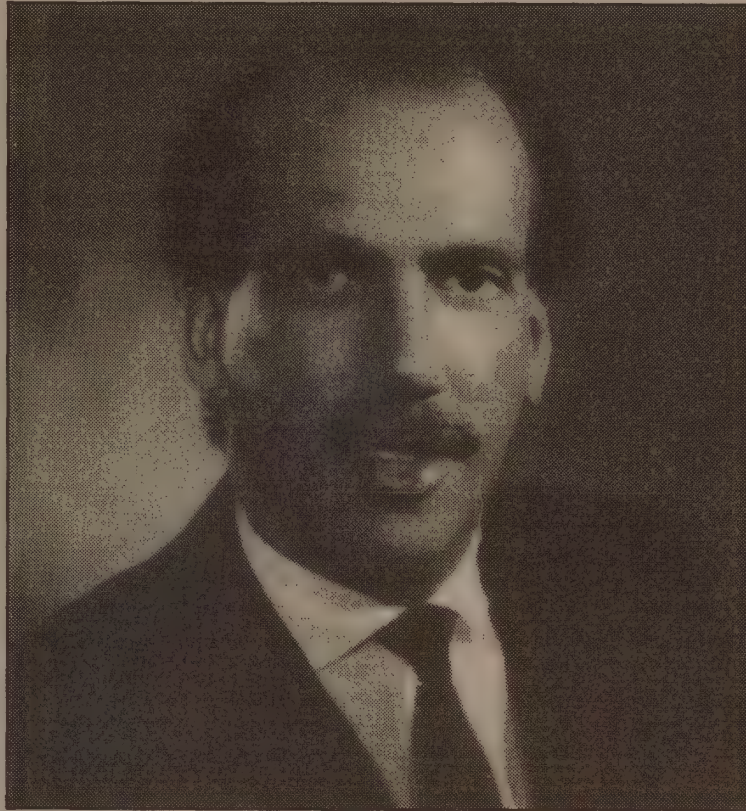

"I kept it going through college. Then, when I was 23, I sold it to a San Francisco conglomerate."

"How big was this business when you sold it?" I asked.

"Annual revenue was twenty-five million," he said. "I guess I kind of retired when I was 23. For awhile, anyway."

Bob Sillerman, today, is 43, and is the single largest investor in radio stations in America. He owns or has a large part in more than forty of them, many in the major markets around the country, including Manhattan. (Two days after this interview, the New York Times reported he is in contract to sell his interest in WNEW-AM. He is keeping his interest in WNEW-FM). He buys them, successful or not successful, persuades management, if he can, that they are more capable than they ever believed they were, and he makes them prosper. "What do you know that they don't know?" I asked. "Well, I've been doing this for a long time," he says. "I can bring more competitive techniques to a market, particularly a smaller market. I find that people often have a pre-conceived notion on how to do something. They don't question it. For example, we might find they have been broadcasting the news from 7 to 7:30

"...people don't understand how LIU Southampton contributes to their lives... the Marine Science department is one of the two best in the country."

every morning because they have been doing it for years. We might do market research and discover that people tend to get up later in the morning now and that 7:30 to 8 would be better. You get the idea. We come in with energy, ingenuity and a can-do approach. I have a whole group of experts and MBA's that are part of Sillerman Companies."

I am struck by how Sillerman's mind works. From his high school days to today, he has been putting things together in new ways, linking things that nobody thought to link. Sillerman tells me, with a little pride, that he is, in fact, the only executive in his organization WITHOUT an MBA. And yet, when he describes his college education, through Brandeis in three years, with a degree in Political Science and the History of Ideas, it kind of makes sense.

"I was trained not to seek answers but to seek questions," he says.

"It was the best preparation for business you can have."

And yet, his interest in business came earlier than that. It came in high school when his father, whom he adored and who was an early pioneer and legend in the television marketing business, had fallen on hard times.

"I saw what happened when we had no money, the pain and the humiliation. I was thirteen. It was so much more fun to be with my mom and dad when they weren't going through this. I determined this would never happen to me."

The man I am looking at today is also someone who keeps himself physically fit. He is a triathlete, he says. And, he tells me, he runs in the Dan's Papers Potatompton Minithon every year and vividly remembers running in it in the early days "when you had the old course, where you had to stop at the railroad tracks to let the train through." This was fifteen years ago.

Later, after our interview, Sillerman takes me through this magnificent 10,000 square foot oceanfront house. There is an indoor swimming pool and an outdoor swimming pool, both oceanfront, and down below, through some glass, I can see a private gym that is about as big as the living room.

There is also something holistic and New Age about Sillerman. I can't quite pin it down. Mind, body and spirit. He talks about one of his friends, an employee at the college, who has recently been sick and how he and his wife will have a dinner for her that night and how they will conduct a healing.

He takes me through this magnificent house that he and architect Mark Matthews took three years to build — the cedar is from Vermont and the cherry is from Wisconsin and the trees were actually brought to the site and cut and finished right here — and Sillerman is rightly proud of the achievement. He shows me how the wood has weathered as he had hoped it would, he shows me the furniture that was handcrafted for his home by Mark Matthew's brother from the same wood, and he shows me rooms from which you can look out over the ocean from one set of windows and out over the Rolls Royce and Meadow Lane to the bay out the other. He does indeed live well, he keeps his body sharp, his mind is active and he is filled with positive ideas. A New Age businessman.

He is also a private man. I met his wife Laura, to whom he has been married for nineteen years. Then Sillerman tells me about some of his immediate neighbors — Kravitz and Forstman and other Wall Street players and he notes that he doesn't know any of them. His friends are mostly people connected with the college — LIU Southampton — and they are close and he has known them a long time.

He tells me about Road D.

He'd been coming out to the Hamptons since he was a little kid. When he'd gotten older, as a teenager and then as a college student, he'd come out and stay with friends. Then he discovered Road D, a hundred yard long dead end road in Southampton that is right off Meadow Lane and ends at the beach. There are no beach stickers needed for Road D and he started coming there.

What he found was that Road D was also a favorite spot for LIU Southampton people. Still is. He met Tim Bishop, the Provost, Alice Flynn, the head of Freshman activities, Jane Finalborgo, the Director of Public Relations, Carol Lynch, the Director of Admissions. He has been coming to Road D for the better part of fifteen years, and as he is telling me this, a thought suddenly occurs to me and I look out the window. Yes, indeed.

"Now you know why my house is built here," he says. "I am known, among my friends as Road D Annex. When Road D is full, you can park here and walk down."

Now Sillerman talks about the college. In fact, he is passionate about the college.

"My perception is that people don't understand how LIU Southampton contributes to their lives," he says. "You can't measure the impact by the 1,500 people who go there. Just it's being there touches everybody. Did you know that the Marine Science department here is one of the two best in the country? There have been fourteen Fulbright students at the Marine Science department alone. The school is a diamond in the rough. I would like to see the awareness of the college raised so people will view it as a resource and contribute to it as a resource."

Because of his enthusiasm, Sillerman agreed to serve as the chairman of the committee that is bringing the Crosby, Stills and Nash concert to the community on August 31. It is to take place on the soccer field at the college and tickets, available at Ticketmaster, the college administration building, Long Island Sound and Catena's, are $25.

"I hope that this concert will bring 5,000 people to this campus, people who have never been there before," he says.

Bob Sillerman has an apartment in Manhattan on the Upper East Side, an office and staff within three blocks of his home there, and his house on the beach in Southampton. But this house, it is quite clear, is not just a summer home. Equipped with cellular phones and faxes and computers and exercise rooms and swimming pools it is his center, personal and business. Sillerman is here the entire summer. Every weekend the rest of the year. And often during the week off-season as well.

With his interests and enthusiasms and passions he is a little known but very major asset to this community.

UPDATE 2001

Bob Sillerman is now the Chancellor of Long Island University's Southampton Campus. Laura his wife gave birth to a baby girl in August of 1993.

Mr. Sillerman has been an unusual as well as generous administrator for Southampton College. Aside from gathering real life notables (such as Billy Joel) to give the commencement address at the college, in 1996 he also got a not-so-real life notable to give the commencement address: Kermit the Frog. Sillerman said Kermit's contribution was to add the qualities of "understanding, humor, conscience" that he — and hopefully the students — had learned from Sesame Street.

It was at the commencement ceremonies a year ago that Sillerman and his wife Laura Baudo Sillerman pledged, under the auspices of their Tomorrow Foundation, $15 million to the college: $10 million for scholarships and $5 million for the renovation and expansion of the library. This was the largest gift in the history of the college, but not the first by the Sillermans. In 1998 they had donated $2.5 million towards the $10 million construction of Chancellors Hall, which was opened in the autumn of 1998.

It should be noted that the number of Fulbright scholars from Southampton steadily increases, now totaling 35.

Well, it ain't Gardiner's Island, the 2000 acre private island that the Gardiner family bought in 1639, but then Billy Joel is not Robert Lion Gardiner, the 16th Lord of the Manor. The island in question is a little four acre stunner in Three Mile Harbor with sunset views and a modest Nantucket sized cottage. It's for sale. There's been reports that Joel has been sniffing around. Who knows? Maybe there will be music wafting through the breeze for those who sail past sometime soon.

Alec Baldwin of Amagansett has wrapped his new movie The Devil And Daniel Webster, but he has been refusing to edit it or do further production on it until he gets paid. Reportedly he is owed about $6 million by the producer, Cutting Edge Entertainment. Lawyers got involved. A compromise of some kind has been reached. The finishing of the film has commenced once again.

Alec Baldwin can be seen in a supporting role in Pearl Harbor, on screens all across the country this week, and now his brother Steven is doing a war movie, but as a producer. Actor Steven – all the Baldwin brothers are actors, it's the law – has, along with Danny Aiello, plopped down cash for the American rights to the Mick Jagger produced film Enigma, a story by Tom Stoppard about British codebreakers who finally figured out the German code. It stars Kate Winslet and Doughray Scott and was a featured entry at the Sundance Film Festival last year.

Closing a newspaper has never been like this. Spies report that closing night at Dan's Papers for their monster Memorial Day Weekend issue included a Chinese buffet dinner and entertainment by folk singer Jim Turner of Bridgehampton. review: jar the floor

By Jan Silver

Bay Street Theatre begins its tenth season in a state of serendipity. With a well-written, meaningful play, a fine ensemble cast and sensitive direction, Cheryl L. West's Jar the Floor lights up the stage. The many aspects of familial love, pain, tenderness and humor are aired on the Sag Harbor set.

We meet four generations of an African-American family who reveal their lives—warts and all—with wit and poignancy during the matriarch Madear's 90th birthday celebration. Madear may slip in and out of the present, but she's still sharp. Born in Mississippi, she is loyal to her deceased husband. She did domestic work, raised two children and misses living in the country. Actress Claudia Robinson reveals the stubborn crankiness, hurts, mischievousness, and dry repartee that is Madear. ("Marriage ain't somethin' you want to do after you know better.")

Lola, Madear's daughter, is a single mother who came to Chicago and worked her way up to own an apartment building. She loves men, dancing and drinking. Gammy Singer plays her with outspoken sass and touching honesty. Lola is the humorous center of the play. Explaining to her daughter Maydee why she prefers to date younger men, "There ain't no risin' in the floor—if you get my drift—in the man my age."

Maydee is a university professor who put herself through college and owns the suburban Chicago home where the play's action occurs. She is serious, hard-working, and the single mother of a grown daughter. Paula Newsome slowly unveils the hopes and fears that lay beneath Maydee's control and dedication.

Maydee's daughter Vennie (Adrienne Carter), a mixture of hip hop and feminism, is discovering herself and post-college life. She brings a friend, Raisa (Kerrie Blaisdell), to the family party. These youngest women have personal issues which bring them temporarily together. Carter displays the backbone of Vennie's matriarchal lineage. Blaisdell, a Sag Harbor native who cut her teeth on East End stages, brings out the anguish, empathy and slapstick humor that mark Raisa.

Director Jack Hofsiss, whose credits range from Broadway's award-winning The Elephant Man to Bay Street's deliciously antic production of You Can't Take It With You last summer, once again shows his theatrical versatility and understanding of character. He guides his talented ensemble through the slings and arrows of daily living that playwright West has truthfully dramatized.

Hofsiss assembles a formidable production team to assist him. Michael McGarty's set is handsome, realistic and multi-purpose. Michael Gilliam's lighting and Randall Freed's sound heighten the effects of actors and set. Judy Henderson has done a fine casting job and costume designer Nan Young's choices show the generational and personality differences. Gary Hygom and Lee J. Kahrs complete the team as production and stage manager, respectively.

Jar the Floor was a hit Off Broadway in 1999. Playwright Cheryl West casts clear light here on how we live our lives. As Lola reminds her daughter towards the end of the first act: "Maydee, you lookin' for tenure. I'm lookin' for a gigolo. Same need. Different prizes."

Jar the Floor plays at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor, through June 10. Performances are Tuesday through Sunday evenings with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The box office is open Tuesdays through Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. (631-725-9500). Tickets ($32-$46) can be requested on the Web at www.boxoffice@baystreet.org. This Sunday, June 3, is Family Night. Any child over 10 receives a free ticket when accompanied by a full-paying adult.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER # 157 ANOTHER OPENING, ANOTHER SHOW...

The Shelter Island Players show, The Music Man, opens Thursday night, May 31. Last week's Shelter Island Reporter did its second write up on the show and STILL didn't mention who was playing The Music Man (David O'Flynn). Well, maybe the third time will be the charm. I saw a portion of a dress rehearsal.

First, Robert Crowson is absolutely perfect as Winthrop. This boy is a natural talent. His mother, the beautiful Betty Crowson, plays Winthrop's mother, Widow Paroo. She did a terrific Irish accent and and looked like she was having lotsa fun in the role.

Jennifer "The Her-icane" Corwin. Where do I begin? She plays Mrs. Shinn, the Mayor's wife and it has NEVER been done anywhere on any stage, I guarantee it. What a force this woman is!

Jim Wilcenski played the Constable and other supporting parts. What a beautiful voice. I could hear him above everyone. No disrespect to the star, but Jim could have easily been The Music Man.

Nick Denning. Write the name down, you will hear from this boy again. If he doesn't go into acting, he has chosen the wrong profession.

David O'Flynn. His voice has enough power to blister the paint on the back wall. This show required an extremely strong leading man, and they got it in spades.

It's a small miracle that this show pulled together at the last moment. But that's probably true of every show ever produced. The actors were responsible for their own costumes, which works in theory, but would turn me gray if I was in charge. The Friday before opening night, there was no lighting manager, no scenery on stage, no props to work with, no property manager, no stage manager. Suddenly on Saturday, all these positions were filled, like manna from heaven, well somebody must have opened their checkbook...

The other big show news in town is that the Perlman's are back for the second season of their music school. This program is the jewel in the crown of Shelter Island. Musically gifted students from around the world will come to our little island and give performances through the summer. Kids learn string instruments in a no pressure environment. Everyone is encouraged to grow and flourish in their own style. What a gift Itzak and Toby Perlman have given to these children and in time, to the world. The one person the Island really has to thank for the Perlman Music Program being here is Mr. David Huschle. David is a real estate agent among other things and a few years ago he was following the troubles the Perlman's had securing a place for their program in Hamptonia and the surrounding fiefdoms. He knew a local family was about to put their longtime hotel and cabins business up for sale. It was David's brainchild to introduce everyone and see if he couldn't arrange a marriage. He followed the logistics closely and never let it fall apart until it was real. He was the kingpin in the whole deal and we owe him a big thank you.

This program has been adopted by Islanders and is already a beloved addition to life here. I am dearly looking forward to this season's concerts.

We had a very sad event this past week. A fire ravaged Jack's Marina and Bliss' Department Store. I have mentioned these two terrific family business' many times in the three years I have written this column. This is a terrible blow to these families and to everyone on the Island who

The most expensive city in America is - San Francisco. And the most expensive small town in America is some dumb island off North Carolina. Hey. What happened to New York City? What happened to East and Southampton? Let's get those prices up.

* * *

Barbara Corcoran of Corcoran.com Global Real Estate might have looked at New York City in comparison to any other American city and had it come in second (see above), but globally it was even worse. Fourth. Most expensive two bedroom apartment on average will be found in London, with San Francisco second, Hong Kong third and then the Big Apple. A 1,500 square foot pad in Eaton Square, London, will cost you $2,121,179. The same in New York City is about $400,000 less than that. Yeah. And the biggest building in the world is in Kuala Lumpur.

* * *

The editors of the 2001 World Almanac have picked their top ten favorite singers or groups of all time. The Beatles came in first. Frank Sinatra second. Billy Joel of Three Mile Harbor and Southampton third. The remaining seven were Nat King Cole, the Rolling Stones, Ella Fitzgerald, R. E. M., Elton John, Fleetwood Mac and Van Morrison in that order. It's on page 349.

Boxing promoter Cedric Kushner, who lives in East Hampton, is now giving Don King a real run for his money. Kushner, a Capetown, South Africa native, has promoted many heavyweight challengers, has successfully promoted his Heavyweight Explosion card all around the world and represented Hasim Rahman in his recent successful challenge to the title held by Lenox Lewis. The limos go from East Hampton to New York to Atlantic City and back.

Jerry Della Femina and Judy Licht once again open their magnificent oceanfront home for the 14th annual Body Positive, an HIV/AIDs organization benefit, Saturday, June 9, 5:30-7:30 p.m. The summer tradition was begun by the late James Revson. This year ABC Chanel 7's Sam Champion, and Newsday are hosting the event. Food, drink, entertainment and wonderful people will make you feel good while helping others.

Selected artists will open their studios for the benefit of Habitat for Humanity of Peconic on Saturday, June 16. Southampton studios can be visited from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and Bridgehampton area studios can be seen from 1-4:30 p.m. The day will be capped off with a reception and silent art auction from 5-7 p.m. at Channing Daughters Winery on Scuttlehole Road in Bridgehampton.

A new men's Pro-Am tournament will give an exciting spin to this year's East End Open Tennis filled with virtual reality, pop-a-shot, video games, hot tub for late-night bathing, pool, and a basketball and tennis court. Saturday night, Conscience Point's Noah Tepperberg and Jason Strauss hosted a late-night party there, and would you believe... no alcohol??? They only served hype-energy drinks and water. They thought of it all: great parking, unbelievable security, and not a neighbor in sight. Attendees included: Paris and Nicky Hilton, Kim Stewart, DJ Marc Ronson, Cabana's David Sarnar, Michael Alt, Jacquelyn Powers, and Miami's Tommy Pooch. And although Stuff Magazine's house thought of everything, Tavern in Southampton apparently didn't. The club did not have their women's and men's bathrooms ready for the big kick-off weekend. When this elite crowd had to use the facilities, there was nothing but a sheet of velvet separating one stall from the other. Everyone saw everything... maybe next time, they'll leave something to the imagination. See you all...(hopefully not ALL) of you next week!

Run

were under 33 minutes. Very close to personal bests for them. They had been pulled along by the man from Kazakhstan.

"Has he won any important races?" I asked Natasha. "Olympic Games? World Games?"

Yes, he had. He had won first place in the 12K race in the World Games in Greece in 1995. He had won first place in the 5K race in Hungary in 1994. He'd also competed in the World Championships in Denmark in 1996.

I asked Natasha to ask him his fastest time for 10K. I also asked her to ask him his greatest accomplishment. His response made Natasha gasp.

"He has run 42K in 2 hours and 22 minutes," she said. "At 10K his best is 30.42. He's also won the national championship of Kazakhstan in track. He won a car."

At this point, dozens and then hundreds of runners were coming across the finish line to the cheers of the spectators. Among them was Mischa Brenner, Natasha's husband, who was finishing in 42 minutes and change. Also John Connor, a Springs resident who has run this race more than fifteen times, winning it in his age group three or four of those times.

And then I saw Barbara Gubbins, who has won the women's division more times than anyone else who has ever entered that division. She had won it again, in 37.06, beating out the second place women's finisher Renee Rosen, by 36 seconds. Megan Gubbins, Barbara's 17 year old daughter, was third. She was there, at the finish line, talking about the race with her mother.

"Mom can still beat me over 7k," Megan told me. "But under that distance, I can sometimes best her." This race, however, was 10k. Daughter had failed to keep up with mother.

Megan, however, is not without her own considerable accomplishment. Entering for Southampton High School last fall, she won the Suffolk County 3000 Meter Championships. She's off to Harvard in the fall.

"Are you working in your mom's store this summer?" I asked Megan. Barbara and her husband Justin own Gubbin's Running Ahead, on Park Place in East Hampton.

"A bit. Mostly, though, I'm being a nanny." After a fashion, the crowds began to drift off, either to the Candy Kitchen for some much earned breakfast, or to the Meeting House for the food, gifts, rubdowns, and awards ceremony, or into their cars and back home to read the weekend papers.

And so, the 23rd Annual Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon came to an end, a terrific success, with much money raised to benefit the Long Island Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society, and with the full and much appreciated cooperation of the Southampton Police, the Presbyterian Church, the volunteers from the MS Foundation and Dan's Papers, the Bridgehampton Ambulance Corps, Time and Self magazines and all the other participants.

I left with Misha and Natasha to walk back to the car remembering something I will never, ever forget, the time, six years ago, when I was driving

HEADLINE NEWS

Langhorn Heads Riverhead Democratic Party

It was recently reported in Newsday that James Langhorn, a former U.S. Air Force sergeant who has been appointed to head the Riverhead Town Democratic Party, is the first nonwhite to head a local political party in Suffolk County, indeed, on all of Long Island.

But in fact, African-American Andy Malone headed the East Hampton Town Democratic Party in the 1970s.

At any rate, whether the first or second African-American appointed to such a position, Langhorn downplayed the uniqueness of his appointment, by saying that if this had occurred a generation ago it might have been special but things have changed since then.

Langhorn has put together a roster of candidates that the party hopes will find victory this November. Among them are former Riverhead Supervisor Vincent Vilella, who lost a re-election bid in 1999, is a candidate for town council. Anne Moroh, the manager of the Laurel-Mattituck Veterinary Hospital is seeking the supervisor post. An incumbent town board member, Christopher Kent, who had been bruited about as a possible candidate for supervisor, is running for the Suffolk County Legislature on the North Fork - in a district that has never put a Democrat in office.

leave the country."

Weir also told me a very famous story making the rounds in racing car circles about an old Ferrari racing car that an English driver, part of a visiting English racing team, bought in Argentina that the government wouldn't let him take out, but that he took out by breaking it down into little pieces and packing the pieces among the luggage of his teammates when they left the country.

"As for the body and chassis," he told me, "at the Buenos Aires airport, a scheduled 747 cargo plane taxied down to the end of the runway, a van appeared from out of the bushes, the cargo bay opened, and men inside the van quickly unloaded the body and chassis which was then flown to Mexico. They reassembled the car in Mexico."

Car stories. On the dashboard of Weir's Alfa were the business card of an excellent mechanic in these parts — Brian, at Sam's Auto 324-8686. Weir swears by him.

The best of the lot, at least so it seemed to me and I was the judge making that decision, was told to me that morning by Jeff Vogel of Bridgehampton, who was standing alongside the cutest little taxicab yellow convertible called a Fiat Jolly. It looked something like a MiniMoke if you know what that is. It had four little scooter wheels, a tiny engine compartment up front, four wicker seats under a festively fringed awning top, and a horn that went beep-beep.

"It was built by Enzo Ferrari in Italy in the 1950s for his wife and baby son Dino. It was a beach car. There are pictures of them, this lovely wealthy family, driving around in it. Dino died tragically at 21 years of leukemia. And when Enzo died, he left this Jolly — there were only about fifty of them ever made — to his beloved wife. But Enzo also acknowledged, and he took care of, an illegitimate son. And that is who I bought this car from 22 years ago. Mrs. Ferrari had died, and now everything passed to Piero Lardi, and he immediately decided he would sell everything that had belonged to the woman who was not his mother.

depends on them.

I am personally grateful to Camille and Michael Anglin, owners of Jack's Marina for the time they let me buy a giant stuffed dragon on time payments for a little boy for Christmas the first year I was here and money was so tight. And the many times I sought Camille's advice for gifts. And the many times Michael told me a joke, and a thousand tiny moments that made my life and other people's lives just a little easier that day.

I am grateful to Peggy and Walter Bliss for all the effort they put into being a general store on a tiny island. They always had at least one of anything you needed. There had to be hours of ordering, stocking and stacking that we never saw. Where else could I have sent my daughter for a bathing suit with a blank check signed by me and had complete trust that the proprietor would fill in the exact amount?

The Bliss' and the Anglins typify the integrity and trust that identifies Islanders as different from the rest of the "Gimme, gimme or I'll sue" New Yorkers. Everyone's prayers are with them and we hope they will make a big comeback soon. •

So that's how I got it.

"Incidentally, there is a wonderful picture, taken of one of these Jollies being lowered onto the dock from Aristotle Onassis' boat in Monaco. Onassis had the car on the boat. The car doesn't weigh very much, so it is easy to have on a big boat. I've seen a wonderful picture of that car — its a green one — and Aristotle is driving it and alongside him is Maria Callas and in the back seat is Winston Churchill. They are seeing the sights."

At the awards ceremony, I gave Vogel, in addition to a beautiful glass trophy, a yellow peaked baseball hat with an L on it, which, I said stood for left turn. All us local people know that if you wear a yellow hat with an L on it, all traffic will stop so you can make a left turn onto the Montauk Highway in the summertime.

I also gave a yellow left turn hat to Christie Brinkley, who, with Peter Cook was on the dias where the awards were being given out, co-hosting the event.

As I did, I passed Kevin Bodkin of Sag Harbor who had told me the story about his dad's white Cadillac given him by Joe DiMaggio. He was sitting at the wheel of this car, and he motioned for me to come over.

"I just want to tell you that I made that story up," he said. "I told my wife you were giving out this award and that I had no idea what to tell you and she said oh just make something up. So I did. That was it."

"That wasn't a true story?" I asked incredulously.

"Nope."

"This really wasn't Joe DiMaggio's car?"

"Nope."

"Well, I'll be damned," I said. "You sure fooled me."

the lead car through the many lefts and right turns of the race, and we were all talking to one another there in the car, and I looked up to discover that I was no longer on a road that was part of the race course. Behind me, dutifully following along, were these hundreds and hundreds of runners, fully trusting in my leadership to get them to the finish line in proper formation. I do not ever recall being quite so terrified.

There was nothing to be done, however, except to try to find my way back to where I was supposed to be without doing much further damage. We wound up going 11.3k. And I spent much of my post-race time apologizing profusely to the incredulous participants.

Now here it was four years after that catastrophe and I am given one job to do and it is to do the one thing the only thing I have ever done wrong in the many years of being involved with this event.

Well, we made it. 10.0k. See you next year.

45 Excalibur Cruiser Starting at $292,000

The third largest boat builder in the world, Wellcraft, has introduced its newest addition, the 45 foot Excalibur Cruiser. You might recognize this Wellcraft cruiser which has been featured on Miami Vice and Bay Watch. It boasts an 11'8" beam, four person sleeping capacity, and has an ergonomically designed helm for high performance operation with backlit gauges and an adjustable steering wheel. The cockpit provides over 50 cubic feet of storage, has a fresh water shower storage locker accessible from the integrated swim platform and a Granulon counter top, to name just a few of its many features. The cruiser also has a five-year structural hull warranty, transferable. Available at Dave Boffill Marine, 1598 North Highway, Southampton, 631-283-3444.

Private Gulfstream V Jet $8,000 per hour

So you think you're really flying first class...? Ask Aerosmith Aviation's president Kevin Hall (a/k/a Sky) to show you his first class and you will soon realize there is luxury and then there is ultra luxury. For companies and individuals alike, Aerosmith is a personal, 24/7, global flight service. Mr. Hall, who is also a pilot, personally selects the aircrafts Aerosmith flies. His favorite is the three level, executive configured, Boeing 747 Corporate Jet that seats and sleeps 40 in opulence and is beyond this writers' wildest imagination! This is an "exclusive, seriously high-end," luxury jet service. New York to Tokyo on a Gulfstream V will set you back a cool quarter of a million... Service available at Aerosmith Aviation, 631-725-3581 and 917-921-9796.

2001 Mercedes-Benz SL-500 Starting at $83,800

What an elegant way to drive around the Hamptons. Some of us fly, some of us boat, some of us drive. The Mercedes-Benz design is not about following trends, it's about individual character and is uniquely satisfying. Mercedes-Benz recognizes that exceptional people demand exceptional quality and style and their vehicles are fashioned to set Mercedes-Benz drivers apart from the crowd. And now, with more custom options than ever before, every SL500 is truly a reflection of personal style and taste. There are several models to choose from, so sit back and enjoy the ride. Available at Mercedes-Benz, Montauk Highway at Route 27, Southampton, 631-283-0888.

be inconsistent with the intent of the National Estuary Program.

"There has been unanimous consensus among the community leaders that any treated groundwater should be discharged to land rather directly into the estuary," wrote Thiele to Whitman.

He went on to say that the New York State Department of State had promised they would not go ahead with any plan without the support of local government. But at a meeting on May 16, the EPA, Thiele says, reported that the Department of State favored the proposed remediation remedy for Rowe.

"I subsequently contacted George Stafford, the Director of the Division of Coastal Resources and Waterfront Revitalization for your agency," Thiele wrote to Secretary of State Daniels. "Mr. Stafford informed me that the EPA had represented to DOS that the proposed remedy had local support. This is a total fabrication."

Thiele went on to say that at this meeting, held in Sag Harbor, "overwhelming opposition was expressed by the public. I have contacted the Village of Sag Harbor. They have informed me that not only has approval not been given...Village officials have substantial reservations about the proposed plan."

Concluding his letter to Whitman, Thiele wrote, "I can assure you that in the long run this will prove to be a very ineffective way to protect the environment and will only further damage the already tainted reputation of the EPA on eastern Long Island."

JUST SOUTH OF THE HIGHWAY

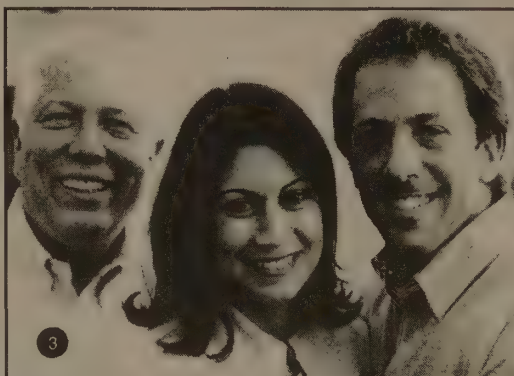

Location, Location, Location. Dan Rattiner's new glossy, southofthehighway had its launch party last Saturday at London Jewelers, which is on the highway, but on its south side. The place was packed with well wishers for Dan, Cat and Joan, as well as Dan's Papers people, and those who figured that with six photogs in attendance, there was a pretty good chance they'd have their picture taken. Dan was miked because there is a TV documentary in the works about the Hamptons so remember the snide comment you make today may be a soundbite tomorrow.

NURIT'S AND WERNER'S HOLIDAY BARBEQUE

Nurit Kahane Haase's invitation for a barbeque lunch said the theme was to celebrate life and maybe that lofty wish made the the skies brighten with sunshine for the first time over the Memorial Day weekend. The guests were an eclectic group of media people, business owners and a number of celebrities we see on the shopping networks. An unusual act of spontaneous kindness--there is something special that could happen for me (no-I cannot say), and when Nurit heard about it, she took off a bracelet she was wearing and gave it to me for good luck.

PLANNED PARENTHOOD OF HUDSON PECONIC

Neither rain nor wind nor heavy traffic could deter guests from attending the Planned Parenthood East End Benefit. This year the hosts were April Gornik and Eric Fischl in their new and unique home in North Haven, where light appeared to be the centerpiece. A gutter ran into the center hallway and water poured in when it rained, creating a fountain of living art. There was more than enough rain to accomplish this feat. Works of art from notable artists like Ross Bleckner, Roy Lichtenstien, Chuck Close, Eric Fischl and April Gornik were auctioned off in live and silent biddings.

"THE DRAMA DESK AWARDS"

The Producers, Mel Brooks' hit musical based on his hit movie, was the big winner at the annual Drama Desk Awards, an organization of professional writers, critics and editors who cover all areas of New York theater. Mel Brooks and his team walked off with 11 awards, winning awards in almost every major category including Outstanding Musical, Outstanding Book, Outstanding Direction of a Musical and Outstanding Lyrics, not to mention Nathan Lane's fifth Drama Desk Award. I don't know how you'll ever get tickets now and the Tony's are still to come. Proof was named Outstanding New Play and its star, Mary-Louise Parker, Outstanding Actress. Lily Tomlin hosted, and presenters included Blythe Danner, Camryn Manheim, Reba McEntire, and Treat Williams. It certainly was a stellar evening in the theater. Thanks to everyone involved, especially Robert R. Blume and TheatreSport, Ltd. and most certainly Randie Levine-Miller, the Executive Director for Drama Desk, for making the evening a resounding success.

Saving The Land

Preservation Issues Come To The Forefront Here On The Bucolic North Fork

By Susan Simm

It is human nature to resist change. Beginning with our reluctance to leave the warmth of the womb and ending with the unknowable landscape of death, we dig in our heels at thousands of little points in between, always preferring the familiar to the foreign.

Despite this inherent reluctance we are, as a species, extraordinarily adaptable. This is both our best quality and our worst. Best because it insures our survival. Worst because it can lead to indifference.

We have reached a watershed here on the North Fork. These are critical times in many respects, but especially in terms of land preservation and development. We can do nothing and the tide will carry us all along just the same, the cards falling where they may. Sometimes in favor of preservation, sometimes not. But the tide will continue and so we all have choices, however reluctantly, to make.

The vineyard industry is rapidly replacing potato farming as our leader in agriculture. For most of us, the sight of grapevines is a more welcome one than housing developments. But while this doesn't mean that we should halt development and economic growth altogether, it does mean that a plan of action is needed to control growth and hence preserve our rural landscape. We need to work diligently, intelligently and, most importantly, TOGETHER to save some of the beautiful places we know and love.

First, we need to realize that some change is inevitable. Just as farmers have adjusted to changing agricultural preferences, all North Fork residents have to adjust to a changing environment. The extent to which this occurs is up to us. But the contributing factors of overflow from the South Fork and, even more so, the increasing recognition and expansion of the vineyard industry here on the North Fork are bringing with them attendant issues. "The grape and wine industry is a locomotive pulling the train of economic development," said Jim Trezise, President of the New York Wine & Grape Foundation. "It is creating a rural renaissance in several parts of the state and has become the shining star of New York agriculture as well as a mecca for tourists. And the best is yet to come."

Next, we need to rethink the 5-acre zoning proposition the land" is a wonderful notion, but the truth is that farming is a business, first and foremost. And if a farmer cannot afford to continue operating, guess what happens next? If the community is really interested in saving agriculture on the North Fork, the best way to do that is to save the farmers. Do that, and the land preservation issue will take care of itself.

Buying development rights, now that amounts being offered for farmland are closer to real market value, is a great way to achieve this goal. Many acres are being preserved on the South Fork through this program. Pretending to ignore the changes taking place on the North Fork will only delay more aggressive pursuit of this powerful preservation tool.

Finally, the wine industry is a potential home run for our region. Even though the industry is still in its adolescence, the people and the wines they are making are becoming headline news and are receiving attention in high places.

Finally, the wine industry is a potential home run for our region... the people and the wines they are making are becoming headline news...

and consider other alternatives. This potential zoning code change places too much of the burden on the large landowners: our farmers. It is unreasonable to expect the farmers to be the North Fork's philanthropists. If the goal is only to limit the density of housing in the community, then maybe this idea will work. But if the goal is to preserve open space, it will not. It will not stop development; It will merely change the face of it. And more importantly, it will force farmers to reconsider whether or not to sell their land. If they cannot borrow enough operating funds due to lost equity in their land, farmers who hadn't considered selling may be forced to under these circumstances. Viewing farming as a lifestyle chosen by hearty souls who want to "live off

And it will only get better. In California's Napa and Sonoma Valleys, wine grapes were planted about 100 years ago and today, the bulk of top quality California wines come from those two regions. The similarities between our area and the wine producing California Valleys are striking in terms of entrepreneurship and level of talent flowing in. The Californians figured out how to balance rural beauty with a thriving industry. So can we.

Preservation is a controversial topic because there are so many opinions and angles of approach. But if we are to save the best of our beautiful landscape, it is vital that the custodians of that land be dealt a fair hand.

By The Glass...

New York Times "Long Island Vines" columnist Howard G. Goldberg is not often effusive when it comes to praising Long Island wines, but he clearly made a departure for an exceptional new release from Macari Vineyards. Mr. Goldberg writes, "On a 100-point scale, Macari Vineyards' zesty 2000 Sauvignon Blanc scores a resounding 97 points. In other words, it is by far the finest Long Island sauvignon blanc...I have tasted. At $13, the wine is virtually a give-away..." (New York Times, Sunday, May 27.)

After the release last weekend, Alexandra Macari was exhausted by Sunday evening. Over 2,000 visitors had stopped by the vineyard on Sunday alone.

"We always believed that by maintaining the quality and nurturing the vineyards, the proof would be in the bottle," said Ms. Macari. "We couldn't agree more with Howard Goldberg's review. Especially while celebrating our third anniversary."

A total of 400 cases were produced and in his review Mr. Goldberg suggested limiting sales in the tasting room to two bottles per customer. When I reached Ms. Macari by phone on Monday afternoon about 3:30 p.m., they had just stopped offering the wine for sale for that day. "I'll save you a bottle," she said after I promised to stop by on Wednesday afternoon.

"The positive reviews Long Island wines are receiving from wine columnists like Howard Goldberg," said Long Island Wine Council Executive Director Jane Baxter Lynn, "are generating more and more interest in the importance of Long Island as a premium wine producing region." Bravo, Macari!

Also released this weekend past was Bedell Cellars' Main Road Red, a blend of Merlot, Cabernet and Foch grapes. This Beaujolais style wine is light and fruity, with hints of cherry, blackberry and raspberry flavors. A great sipping wine next to pasta or anything grilled. This non-vintage offering retails for $9.99 a bottle.

Focus On New Business: Cottage Rose

By Susan Simm

Nothing prepared me for the beauty and sophistication of this Baiting Hollow shop. The feeling here is turn of the century beach house with wainscott accents and antique light fixtures. Displays that would be equally at home in Bergdorf's glow with scented candlelight while a Madame Butterfly aria floats in the background. The deft hand behind this creation belongs to Carol Vargas, a former ready-to-wear merchandiser who wielded her magic on Madison Avenue before heading out to the East End full time.

Carol Vargas in her beautiful shop

"After graduating from F.I.T., I worked for Emanuel Ungaro for five years as General Merchandise Manager, often traveling to Milan and Paris. It was wonderful!" said Carol, a slim and stylish blond with such sparkling enthusiasm that, if she were a wine, she would be champagne.

"After leaving Ungaro, I worked for Geoffrey Beene before launching Revillon's 5th Avenue flagship store," Carol continued. "Later on, I helped them open their Palm Beach location." Eventually, Carol landed at Frette, the French linen manufacturer because she wanted to learn more about that end of the business.

Cottage Rose reflects Carol's global life experience and is filled to the rafters with top-notch lingerie, linens and accessories from the U.S. and abroad. Worth the trip alone are the Goldleaf and Hydrangea line, Lamperberger alcohol scenting lamps from France and Irene Hirose sachets, all among Carol's favorites. Goldleaf and Hydrangea is a clean, lightly floral scent and is available here as perfume, lotion, candles and soap. The Lamperberger lamps – a Cottage Rose exclusive – are great for eliminating odors, such as cigarette smoke, and use scented alcohol in fragrances such as ocean breeze. They are made with a wick which you light for a few moments to heat a stone collar. This collar then wafts the scent into the air without the lamp remaining lit, so you can continuously scent a room without worrying about leaving a flame.

Another wonderful fragrance line is Lady Primrose, available here for babies as a lotion and powder and for women as "dusting silk," a smooth treat that comes in a cut glass shaker and can be used on linens and body alike.

Sprinkled throughout the shop are many top-of-the-line labels in lingerie, all chosen with a shrewd and knowing eye. Claire Pettibone, Ann Lewin, Felina and Raza share space with Nola True, Flora Nikooz Bridal and the "Flash" line – adorable! – as well as Crabtree & Evelyn sleepwear.

"Many people don't know about the Crabtree & Evelyn line. They wash so well," said Carol, who wears a pair of Nola True linen capris in sage with a matching smoking jacket. Both the labels and pant hems are dotted with tiny pink satin rosettes and covered with pale pink organza. "We also have mother-daughter sleepwear sets. These are hard to find. Most people don't know that they're available."

Despite the focus on lingerie, home accessories are not an afterthought here. Shabby Chic and vintage fabric covered pillows, knitted throws and The Good Home Company scented laundry fragrance are just a sampling. The laundry fragrance, beautifully packaged, is available as a liquid to add to the rinse cycle and also as a sheet spray. Both are available in lavender, beach house and honeysuckle scent. Dryer sachets, in a lavender scent, are a great way to freshen linens and cottons after washing.

Linen and organza 'envelopes,' filled with dried lavender flowers, are designed to line drawers, but Carol recommends using them as pillow sachets as well. "They fit perfectly inside a case and smell heavenly," she said. Some of Carol's favorite accessories and mine, too, are the white chenille covered pillows with a bright floral accent in primary colors. Fun, summery and soft, these are the pillow equivalent of comfort food!

All manner of totes and beach bags perch on shelves and in nooks and crannies. There are a nice selection of vibrant cover-ups for the beach, raffia house slippers topped with silk flowers and beaded patent thongs in shades of green apple and teal. You will also find embroidered Jacques Levine slippers, colorful golf sweaters and even silk boxers for men, lest they be forgotten amongst all the delectable frippery.

Carol's sense of humor pervades the space. "Lucky Chick," a line packed in printed tote boxes, is available in bridal-in-a-box, pedicure-in-a-box and as a kit containing shampoo, lotion and other necessities in a lavender fragrance. This last also includes a cooling eye pack, perfect for long plane trips. Just pop in the freezer before heading to the airport and arrive at your destination minus the puffy bags often associated with extended flights.

Carol and her husband, who still works in the city, have owned a house in Baiting Hollow for six years. After learning that the dilapidated building on the corner of a small, country-style shopping center in the hamlet was going to be renovated by the Terry family of Amagansett's Lobster Roll Restaurant fame, they jumped at the opportunity to rent space and open Cottage Rose two years ago. Carol managed the store long distance until this November when she moved out here full time.

"I still don't know how I managed to do both for almost two years," said Carol, who joins her husband two days a week in Manhattan and he then, in turn, comes out here for the weekend. She admits that this can be a little difficult but they are finding a way to make it work. Does she miss the city?

"I'm so focused here that I don't," said Carol. "Two days a week, I like going in and having dinner and checking out what everyone's doing. I look at the windows to get ideas about what might work for my space." She has always wanted to have her own store and seems thrilled to really be doing it.

"Merchandising is what I love the most," said Carol. And at this charming rose garden of a shop, it shows.

Some Like It Hot: A World Class Fajitas Recipe

South of the border cuisine never stops gaining popularity in the U.S. for many good reasons. The real thing, and I'm not referring to Taco Bell here, tends to be filling, high in fiber, low in fat and big on flavor. Salsa eclipsed our beloved catsup years ago, cumin has become a common spice in many American spice racks and it's increasingly hard to find someone who doesn't know what cilantro is.

Along with the popularity of Mexican food have come many variations on how to prepare it. While the purists among us gravitate toward truly authentic recipes and adhere to every measurement, I have always found it more fun to experiment a little. For instance, a recipe for a dressing can become a marinade, which can then be adjusted and used in an entirely new way and eventually become an integral part of a new dish. After many preparations for family and friends, a new classic is born.

This is exactly how I came to invent, or rather evolve, 'One of the World's Best Fajitas Recipes.' Originally a dressing recipe for grilled vegetables in an issue of Cooks magazine almost ten years ago, it morphed many times to become what it is today. Enjoyed by friends as well as our former catering clientele at Wainscott Produce Company, these fajitas are, as discerning gastronome and acerbic columnist Michael M. Thomas of The New York Observer noted, "great." High praise from one of life's greatest critics.

Fajitas Chipotles

There are as many variations on the fajitas theme as there are varieties of chili peppers. This one, while a bit of work, is well worth the effort.

Serves 4-6

- 6 boneless, skinless chicken breasts
- 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
- 1 can chiles chipotles* in adobo sauce (available at Latin markets and specialty shops)
- 1 clove of garlic, minced
- 1 /3 cup white wine vinegar
- 1 /3 cup canola oil
- Cumin, to taste
- Few sprigs (or to taste) fresh cilantro, stemmed and minced
- 1 large Spanish onion, cut into slices
- 1 can fresh diced tomatoes, with juice

1. Remove 1-2 chiles (depending on how hot you want the dish to become) from the can and, while holding under running water, seed and remove interior veins. (Be extremely careful not to touch your eyes as they will burn from any contact with the chilis.) Mince and set aside.

2. In a non-reactive bowl, add garlic, mustard, chipotles, 2 teaspoons of adobo sauce (from the can of chiles) and vinegar. Whisk in oil until well blended.

3. In a separate bowl, add the chicken and about two thirds of the marinade, reserving the rest, tossing well to coat. Marinate at least one hour but up to four.

CORRECTION

Recipe ingredients appearing in May 25 issue for banana bread should have read:

- 1 1/2 cups organic spelt flour
- 1/4 cup organic brown rice flour

For further information regarding where to buy the recipe ingredients, call Claire or Kathleen at The Natural Choice in Southold at 765-5153.

THE NORTH

4. Heat a charcoal or gas grill and grill the chicken until cooked through, being careful not to dry out. Use marinade to baste chicken while grilling, then toss out any remainder. DO NOT place cooked chicken in the same bowl with marinade. Set cooked chicken aside. When cool, cut into strips about half an inch wide.

5. Pour off some of the oil from the reserved marinade

(which will have separated while it sat) into a large saute pan. Over medium-high heat, cook sliced onions, sprinkling with cumin to taste, until wilted, 10-20 minutes in all. About half way through, add remaining marinade in bowl and stir well.

6. Add chicken, tomatoes and season to taste with salt. Turn heat to low, cover and cook approximately 10 minutes more. Remove from heat and add chopped cilantro to taste.

Bon Appetit!

Serve with tortillas or rice, steamed asparagus and salsa. For a vegetarian version of this recipe, email me at ssimm@optonline.net

Kicking The Habit(at)

By Chris Pickerell

It's a laudable goal. Restore some aspect of the natural environment to the benefit of wildlife and mankind alike. I think we can all agree that, when possible, we should make every effort to correct damage that has been done. Why not restore a salt marsh that's been filled, re-plant cleared woodlands and meadows? Sounds easy, but is it? Can we even come close to rebuilding the smallest natural feature in the landscape, much less an entire ecosystem? We can restore houses, cars, paintings, all inanimate objects. As scientists it seems that the more we learn about individual plants and animals the more questions we have regarding their hidden interactions. How can we possibly restore something if we really don't even understand how it works?

To start with, it is useful to mention that as a general rule most ecosystems begin with some form of plant life. Plants of all types provide food, shelter and structure to whatever else survives out there. Given their importance and the ease with which we can propagate and handle plant material, restoration ecology usually involves manipulating plants or the changing conditions to support or control certain species of plants. However, that is not to say that plants are the extent of natural diversity. Plants are only the beginning. Given our lack of knowledge and inability to add the other components, we usually plant and wait for everything else to show up. In our defense, it would be unreasonable to add everything at once, even if we could.

In the field, the term "restoration" is used rather lightly and is commonly used to describe everything from invasive plant removal to planting of one species. Webster's dictionary defines restore as "to put or bring back into a former or original state." This begs the question what was the former or original state? Do we really know what things looked like, much less how they functioned? It's kind of like trying to restore a house without the plans. Even worse, say we know what the ecosystem looked like; would it survive in the context of current development, climate changes, water and air quality? I would argue that in light of such changes and the fact that our methods are so simplistic we never really "restore" anything in the truest sense of the word....enhance, maybe.

At best, restoration ecology is like shooting at a moving target. The most we can hope for is coaxing a restoration site in the right trajectory towards the chosen end point. The trick is to understand the limitations of the site and choose a realistic end point. It is impossible for us to achieve the ultimate goal of a functionally diverse, self-sustaining habitat without the passage of time. We can only create the right conditions and let nature take its course. Mother nature has to act on our work before it can mature into what even the most novice observer would regard as a mature ecosystem.

One of the more useful tools in restoration ecology is that of what we call a "reference site." This normally involves identifying the same type of habitat that you are working on in the vicinity of your project area. Hopefully, the reference is free of any obvious disturbances and reflects what your site would have looked like had it not been disturbed. Using the house analogy, it's like finding the house you want to restore in an unaltered state in a nearby town. Once you have this, you could hire an architect to go over and draw up plans based on this model. In its simplest form a reference site acts in this way. However, a house is not composed of thousands of plants, animals, insects, bacteria that, acting in concert, create the ecosystem.

The next time you enjoy your favorite view across a marsh to the water or along the edge of a woodland or meadow take a moment to ponder the true complexity of what lies before you. How do the various creatures depend on each other? Be thankful that what you have witnessed is still there and we don't have to recreate it, we can't.

He runs CCE's wetlands and eelgrass programs providing local townships and the public with coastal and freshwater wetlands restoration and management guidance. For more information call 852-8660.

What's In Store: Eagle's Neck Paddling

By Susan Simm

Doug Murphy, an amiable sailor of a man with a salt and pepper beard and lively blue eyes, describes himself as a "work in progress." After paddling for years just for fun, Doug decided that it was time for a career change.

"When I first got into this business, I decided to cater to the recreational paddler, not the high end one. At the high end, the boats are very expensive and you need a place to keep them. It's also a limited market. The recreational market is a growing sport and I want the beginner, the person newly interested in it." Doug's approach is working well for him. A self-described "people person," Doug radiates warmth when discussing his chosen profession. His knowledge and keen interest are instantly infectious.

"During our first year, we sold 13 boats," he said. "Now we sell between 325 and 350 annually." Must have taken a pretty big leap of faith to head into that second year!

Doug opened Eagle's Neck with a partner in 1993. "I had been paddling for awhile and I really liked it, so I thought to myself, if you like it so much, maybe you should go into the business!" said Doug. "I knew it was an upcoming sport." A substance abuse counselor at Eastern Long Island Hospital in Greenport (where his wife is still a nurse) for twelve years, Doug continued his counseling part-time until four years ago when he bought out his partner, a professional bookkeeper. "She decided to open her own bookkeeping business, which really took off. So I gave her my blessing and went it alone."

After buying her out, Doug decided to open Eagle's Neck full time. "It's a very seasonal business, so to keep going year-round, I bought a paddle manufacturing business two years ago." His shop is right next door to the retail space occupied by paddles, lifejackets, carts and dry suits, all accoutrements of the sport. This acquisition has worked out well for Doug, who now wholesales the lower-end paddles all over the world as well selling them retail in his shop for $55-175 apiece.

As far as paddles go, "they run the gamut from $20 - for a piece of plastic - up to $400-500. I use whitewater gauge aluminum in making my paddles, which is very strong. I am so confident in my product that I offer a lifetime guarantee. People say that I'm crazy but I say, Hey! L.L. Bean does it and they've been in business a long time! I tell people that if they break it, bring it back and I'll either fix it or replace it. You know, you really don't get many back. In two years, I think I've gotten maybe three back," said Doug.

This attention to service is evident everywhere at Eagle's Neck. Doug's grandson, 14-year old Jeffrey Corazzini, rushes around a corner clutching my ringing cell phone so I won't miss the call while daughter Allison Murphy handles customers browsing among the kayaks on display. 'Grandpa Murphy' clearly loves having his family around. "Jeffrey's probably going to take over this business someday. He really likes it and we have such a good time."

Eagle's Neck only carries polyurethane, or 'plastic' boats for two reasons. The first is that they are considerably less expensive than the 'composite' boats - those made of fiberglass or kevlar, for example - and the group Doug is marketing to doesn't want to spend big money on the sport. Doug even encourages them not to. "Try the sport out for awhile and you can always upgrade because the boats hold their value," he said.

The other reason is that polyurethane boats are a lot more durable, which is especially important here on the North Fork where there are lots of rocks. Unless you are set on keeping your boat in showroom condition, Doug feels that there is no need to pamper it. In fact, when the bottom of a boat gets scuffed from sand abrasion, Doug affectionately refers to it as "acquiring a patina!"

Renting is a great way to try out kayaking before buying. Doug rents all the boats he sells and offers two hour, half day and full day rental options. "Drive up,

GOLFING

Pine Barrens Golf At Pine Hills

By Roy Bradbrook

Pine Hills Golf Club is situated between the LIE and Sunrise Highway and is perfectly placed for both local residents and people traveling from further afield. The course was opened officially back in 1971 and so has a nice sense of maturity. Indeed, as you drive into the car park you may well feel that this is a private club but, in fact, it is truly a course open to all.

Whether you walk or ride, this is a course which will intrigue you and tax your golf skills. As you study the card of the course before setting out to play several things strike you. The course does not have holes of crazy lengths that defy virtually all casual golfers' attempts to reach the greens in regulation. Par 5's are 458 to 490 off the regular tees and the three par 3's range from 142 to 180 yards. The par 4's at 290 to 426 again rely on factors other than sheer distance to defeat your objectives of par or better.

Jimmi Conway has been at Pine Hills for 17 years and has been the Head PGA Golf Professional since 1992. As you talk with Jimmi, it quickly becomes obvious that this is a man with both a true love of the game and a genuine interest in the well-being of all who come to play the course. "We know that there are many choices of golf courses today in this area and it is important that we are seen to provide a package which is good value and offers a round of golf on a course which is well groomed and offers a fair test to the average player and the skilled alike," he told me. "Our Course Superintendent Marty Richter has been here for 21 years and has been the superintendent for the last five and he and his small team of four do a wonderful job in tending the 178 acres of land."

As we played the course, even though it was at the beginning of the season and the greens were still being the placement of your shots to avoid water on one side and being closed out for a shot to the green on the other. If you are sensible this will be an extra indication to you, early on, that this is not a course where only long hitters survive, indeed it is one where extra length is sometimes of little benefit and control of direction is the most important asset.

Pine Hills is a course where the choice of the tees you elect to play from radically changes the way the hole plays. Many courses simply seem to have a platform for the tees and the distance between front and back tees may be marginal. Not so here, for on some of the holes, such as the 16th, a short par 4, there is a nominal 72 yards difference between the championship and regular tees. In practice we decided it was much greater and the placement of the tees provided very different lines of play. Jimmi Conway explained that recent changes to some of the holes means that the course from the back tees really plays more like 7,320 yards than the 7,030 on the old score card that is in the process of being reprinted.

The 4th hole is rated the most difficult. Here a mere 389 yards off the regular tees plays as a dogleg with well placed traps to catch wayward shots. The sloping fairway that can run your ball quickly away from the ideal direction and into the trees. If you reach the green in regulation you can give yourself a pat on the back, as long as you then get down in two putts!

On both 8 and 9, you must keep out of the water

brought up to their desired condition, we saw that Jimmi's comments were very true. The opening hole is one where you are not immediately posed serious problems, unless you make them happen yourself but at the second hole, a 458-yard par 5, you find the first water hazards and this is going to be repeated on a total of ten holes. Here you have to start thinking about

LONG ISLAND'S NEWEST COUNTRY CLUB
UNDER CONSTRUCTION COMMENCING APRIL 1ST

Several years in the planning, Laurel Links Country Club now has its approvals and financing in place and is scheduled to open in the autumn of 2002! The 226-acre property is located in Laurel and will utilize 156 acres for its 7,002 yard layout. The remainder of the property will be devoted to 29 homesites and open space.

THE GOLF COURSE.

Laurel Links is designed to be like the great, old golf courses on Long Island that supplement nature without being obtrusive.

Kelly Blake Moran, golf course architect, established his reputation with nationally and internationally recognized courses like Tres Vidas Country Club in Acapulco, Mexico; the Buenos Aires Golf Club in Argentina; and the Bay Colony Golf Club in Naples, Florida, the site of the Senior PGA Tour's LG Classic.

The elegant clubhouse will feature all amenities normally associated with private club life. A gracious foyer leads to the main dining areas including a spectacular grill room and more formal dining room both with expansive views of the golf course. Lovely french doors open from the dining areas to a large stone terrace.

Downstairs is home to well-appointed mens and ladies locker rooms, the pro shop facilities and an exercise room to help keep you in shape for all the fun. Members can also enjoy an olympic size swimming pool with separate pool house facility as well as HarTru tennis courts.

The Best 1st Hole

(SEMI-PRIVATE & PUBLIC COURSES)
as selected by Long Island golfers

The first hole at Montauk Downs State Park has been voted the Best First Hole on any Public Golf Course on Long Island's East End, by the readers of Dan's Papers.

Par 4 -392 Yards

First off, the fairway shifts ever-so-slightly to the left as your tee shot arches skyward. Hit a straight ball and gape in horror as prevailing southerly winds, barely present on the tee box, will push your ball to the right. Unless you take care to account for these subtleties, you are likely to be heading for a club-full of Montauk Downs' notorious rough. Should you grit your teeth through this wind and determine to play left, there is an impenetrably

With sweeping views across much of the golf course, the first hole at Montauk Downs delivers an appropriate keynote address for those about to encounter one of the nation's legendary layouts for the first time. Just under 400 yards from the championship tees, this is a seemingly straight-out par 4. But as is always the rule on this Robert Trent Jones design, things are not quite what they seem.

dense patch of trees lying in wait about 250 yards from the back tees, though they look to be a non-factor off the drive. But the land hits a swale about 200 yards out, shortening the distance to the trees. Land short of the trees off the fairway and you'll contend with strategically unpruned branches leaning out far enough to block your way to the elevated green.

Even a conservative approach is tenuous. The hole climbs steadily uphill for the last 100 yards after emerging from the swale. A lay-up placed short of two scalloped sentry bunkers still leaves a semi-blind pitch to a hogback green.

Though not the most picturesque of Montauk Downs' holes, No. 1 is a fitting introduction to the types of decisions you'll be required to make all day long.

GOLFING

By Bob Ballot

If you draw a blank when someone tells you they are heading for Fripp Island, South Carolina, you probably aren't alone. Take for instance Rand McNally's cartographers. They seem quite unaware that there is a road, albeit only one, leading to this remote barrier island. It is with some irony then that such an overlooked little remove, about two hours down the coast from Charleston, features a golf course that has put Davis Love III squarely on the map as a course designer.

His Ocean Creek course is one of two superb layouts on this small island resort, which seems to float among the low country marshes. The island's original course, Ocean Point, occasionally rubs shoulders with crashing Atlantic waves. Though Love's layout is spectacular, it is prettier and subtler. An ancient coastal forest of cypress, mangrove and long-leaf pine towers along fairways and above holes. Not too long ago, this pristine setting stood in for Vietnam during the filming of Forrest Gump.

For travelers put off by the conspicuous commercialism of neighboring Hilton Head, Fripp Island presents an intriguing alternative. The resort's GM Ansley Cohen says, "We're perfect for people who are nostalgic for the Hilton Head of 25 years ago. Our guests and residents have discovered that the island's relaxed pace isn't permanently gone, it's just moved up the coast a bit."

The climate at Fripp Island is identical to Hilton Head, the golf equally superb and it is extremely family friendly. All that's missing is the traffic. This is because most residents choose golf carts as their mode of transportation to get around the island.

Many of the spacious and smartly furnished rental villas practically dip their toes in the Atlantic, their patios are so close to high water mark. Or they gaze out on the golf courses. Full kitchens and baths add to the high standard of comfort. And it doesn't hurt their PR that Fripp Island is synonymous with the first course designed by one of the PGA Tour's most successful and admired players.

Most impressive about Love's superbly-conceived Ocean Creek layout is that he intuitively understands the native landscape and works with it, often to dramatic effect, where other more high-profile architects could easily have veered toward self-conscious ostentation.

A good example is the 17th hole, a straight out par 4. The first thing that catches your eye from the tee box is the rolling fairway, and it carries your gaze to the green, 394 yards out from the middle tees. But as you survey the landscape to pinpoint a target for your drive, a surprising little observation is inevitable. None of the trees beyond the green is the least bit distinct. This is because these trees are on the other side of a miles-wide marsh, invisible from the tee box, but implied by the tight fairway, slightly inclined green and fuzzy outlines of the trees far beyond.

Earlier in the round, Love paints picturesque holes with regularity. The second is a short par 4 of 369 yards that plays through a chute over densely vegetated wetlands. The tee shot demands to be hit straight as an arrow, with tall Southern pines growing out of the swamp, aligned tightly with the outer edges of the tee box. Water guards three quarters of the green, including the front.

The par 4 eleventh is intimidating for two reasons. Firstly, and more innocently, water comes at you from the left and right. The cart path, in effect, divides the two lakes en route to the fairway. The real danger, however, arises on the far edge of the water hazard to the right, though not in the form of a bad lie, poor stance or plugged ball.

On this particular day, in the thrall of this challenging and beautiful course, we had long since forgotten the admonition delivered by the starter. And then... the splash. From across the fairway, I looked up to see what made such a noise, only to see my partner immediately beside that spot. Any sun that he had gotten that day quickly had drained from his face. He looked like he'd seen a ghost; or rather, thought he was on the verge of becoming one.

No fish, turtle or frog, he quickly reasoned, displaces that much water when leaving the bank of a pond. After he collected his wits, only one mystery remained. Judging by its abrupt departure, we wondered if the alligator was now nervously telling its friends about the twolegged creature heading right at it with a long, glinting blade in his hands. Ironically enough, perhaps it was the gator that was convinced it would be the victim of a horrible slice!

Big things come in small packages on the 259-yard par-4 fourth. This intriguing concoction, with impenetrable woods on the left and a pond on the right, could accurately be dubbed "the Bowl Hole." Just before the green, the fairway dips way down into a huge swale, necessitating a lot of steam on a bump and run play. The green also echoes this effect. Only the back left corner, which held the pin on this day, matches the plane of the front edge of the green. The remainder drops so much that after a heavy rain it might be tempting to place a diving board above it.

An interesting par 3 is the 146-yard fifteenth. Here again, and as on virtually every hole, you are better off keeping the ball short on approaches to the green because missing the greens behind the hole will prove to be disastrous.

The gems of the back nine are 15 through 17, which produce a very strong finish. 15 poses many questions about the tee shot because the hole doglegs extremely sharply and trees and the distance to the water make you consider a lay-up shot from the tee and then agonize about your ability or desire to go over trees to the fairway. Every golfer is likely to develop his own way of trying to beat this hole and may have to have very different plans according to the wind conditions of the day. The 16th is one of these short par 4's where you may still have a blind second shot to the hole and this is the hole with the most difference in length between the championship and regular tees.

Pine Hills is a course to enjoy time after time to really understand its challenges. There is a tranquility and beauty around the course, which makes it difficult to believe that you are still so close to busy highways. It is a good walking course and the ancillary facilities are excellent. They have a driving range where you can hit from the grass during the summer and as well as a putting green, which has the speed of the main greens. There is another green for chipping and bunker practice. Teaching is also a very important part of life at Pine Hills and Jimmi Conway has the reputation of being an excellent teacher for golfers of all skill levels. He obviously retains a genuine enthusiasm for teaching, but he stressed how important regular practice is for golfers at all levels because of the minute differences between a successful swing and a disaster. Of course, as all of us weekend golfers know, this practice business is really only for the pros – we can walk out to the first tee and hit everything down the middle!

When you put all of these facilities together with a very well stocked pros shop and a full service restaurant and bar, you can understand why Pine Hills is such a popular venue for golfers of all ages and skill levels. You will always be made to feel welcome and that doesn't happen at all of the public or semi-private courses on Long Island, more's the pity.

which featured that fun HBO gang, the Sopranos. As you may know, Big Pussy got whacked at the end of last season, but it didn't prevent him from coming out to the Paradise Café in Sag Harbor – aptly named I think given his circumstances – to be, along with some of his cohorts, part of one of our big two page centerfold shoots. (Shoots?) These are essentially “movie stills,” with a cast of a dozen or more, in which the participants wear jewelry, clothing and other products from local stores which are thereby showcased to our readers.

My better half, Cat Squires, orchestrated this shoot, which took place on the second floor of that establishment and consisted of about a half dozen young children of kindergarten age being read to by Big Pussy, seated in a chair, in a setting made to look like a school library. Some of his cohorts from the show lounge around. I am proud of the work Cat and all her helpers, and of course the Sopranos, did to make this shoot a success. It appears more celebrities will be appearing in future “movie still” shoots.

Fame is fun, I guess. You won't find that shoot in this issue – it will be in an upcoming one. In this issue, you'll find that our centerfold is a shoot Cat put together in a harem – actually set up in a studio in the Springs — complete with harem girls, a swami and – is it really there? – a snake.

Also featured in this issue of SouthoftheHighway is a profile of investment banker Wilbur Ross of Southampton, an interview with designer Cynthia Rowley conducted by designer Betsey Johnson, hot fashion from Katlean de Monchy, another delightful sit-com episode of your favorite SouthoftheHighway family, the Sampsons, -- this time they try moving a nearby farm house onto their property -- and lots, lots more.

I hope you're enjoying this as much as I am.

What will $60 million buy today?

Coco Brown owns approximately fifty acres of woodland in Bridgehampton. The plan is that it will be divided by thirty award winning architects, each creating an ideal Hamptons beach house on one and a half to two and a half acre lots. Notice the extraordinary renderings of some of the houses that are to come, at the bottom of the page. Cut them out and slip them in the appropriate slots.

Each house sells for between $1.5 to $2.5 million. (Thirty houses at an average $2 million each?) Sounds like, for a cool $60 million, every one of these houses could be yours.

Jennifer Hartman

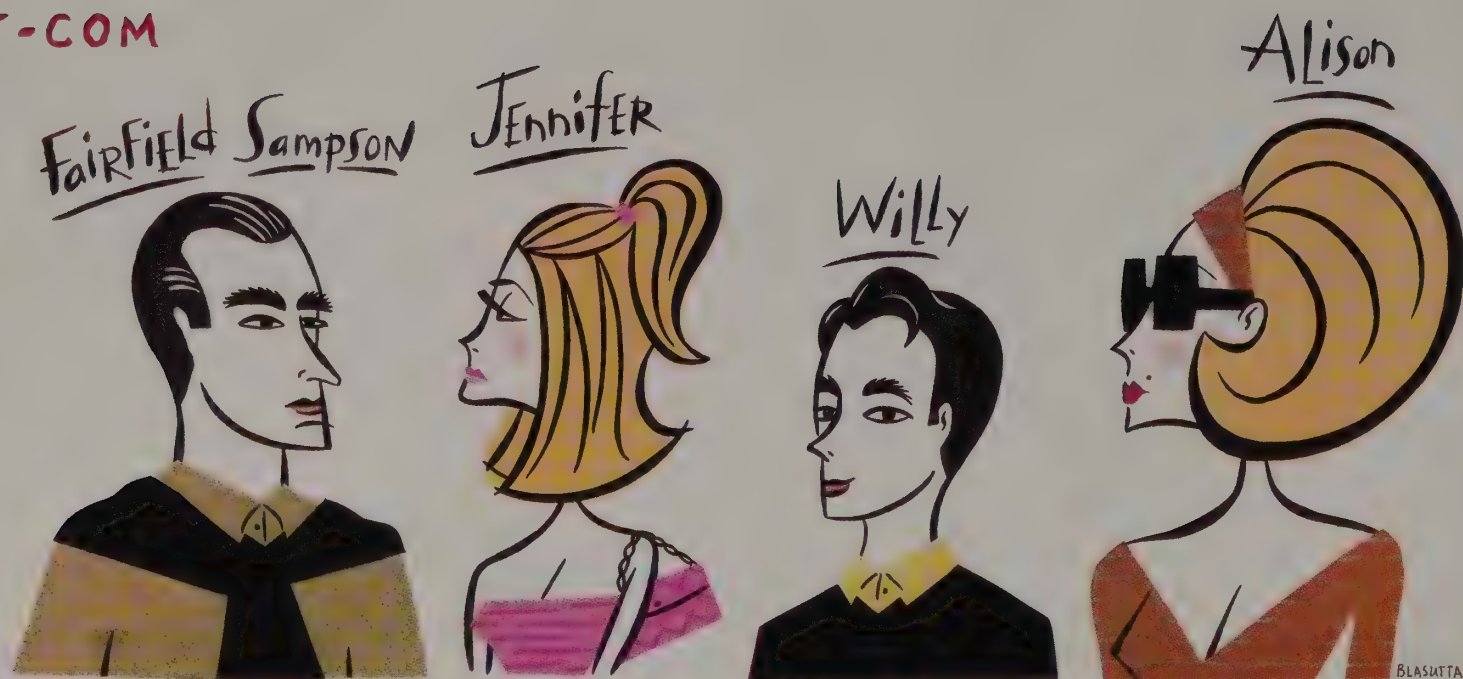

At first glance, Jennifer Hartman appears to be just another gorgeous, blond, California girl. But dig a bit deeper, and you'll find a passionate East Coast environmentalist, demanding to be acknowledged as much for her brains as she is for her looks. In 1997, Jennifer moved East from Los Angeles to be near her family, the Scarboroughs. Yes, as in Chuck, Jennifer is his niece. Her Grandmother Estee Campbell and mother Cynthia Scarborough are Southampton residents. Seduced by the beauty of the beaches, the lushness of the trees, and radiance of the stars, (she swears the stars are different here) Jennifer accepted the perfect job with The Group for the South Fork. Today, she considers the Group her family and the East End her home. The only thing missing from this idyllic picture? You guessed it, Mr. Right.

The Sampsons

EPISODE 2: That the house that roared.

by Dan Rattiner

One Sunday afternoon, Fairfield Sampson was driving his Mercedes along a road near his home when he saw something he found very hard to believe. It was a house, on wheels, attended by a whole lot of vehicles with flashing lights, coming down the street right toward him. There was not enough room for the two of them. He pulled over, waited, and when the house accompanied by its entourage came even with him, he saw that he knew the man in the lead car. It was Frank Morris, from Sag Harbor.

"Hi," he shouted. What was Frank Morris doing South of the Highway?

"Hello, Fairfield," Morris shouted back merrily. Then Morris held his hand up outside his car window and the entire wagon train came to a halt. Fairfield came over.

"What do you think?" Morris said.

"I don't get it," Fairfield said.

"I bought this great old farmhouse. 1871. What do you think?"

"What are you doing with it?"

"I bought oceanfront property here. Closed on it a month ago. We are going to be neighbors. I'm bringing this farmhouse over - people buy houses and move them all the time - and today is moving day. I'm saving the house. The locals are all for it."

"I didn't know you made this kind of money," Fairfield said.

"Hey, it HAPPENED!" Morris said. And then Morris swung his arm forward in a Wagons Ho motion, and the entourage continued along its way.

Who invited him into the neighborhood? Fairfield thought.

Later that afternoon, Fairfield and his wife Alison were sitting out at the pool, watching their daughter Jennifer entertain some of her friends at the beach out front. Fairfield was happy for his daughter. The music thumped. Alison felt a little differently about it. Some of the friends were local people, workingmen.

And then Fairfield steered the conversation toward house moving. Wouldn't it be nice to have an old farmhouse on the eight acres between the house and the pool?

"You've already found a farmhouse?" she squealed.

"Yes. I called a broker. It's from 1817. Even before the one I saw Morris with."

"When can I see it?"

"On Thursday if everything goes as the broker says I will, they will bring it here to you."

"That's wonderful!" Alison shouted, clapping her hands together. Some of the teenagers on the beach looked up, startled.

* * *

All Thursday, Fairfield paced nervously around the house. At a quarter to five he called the broker.

"There's a little snag," the broker said.

"What?"

"The owner wants more money."

"I thought we had a deal," Fairfield said.

"I thought we did too," the broker said.

Alison walked into the room with their fourteen year old son Willie.

"We're not getting the farmhouse?" Alison asked.

"I thought you said all my friends from Kent could stay there this summer," Willie said.

Fairfield made a 'go away' motion with his hand, then talked into the phone.

"Well you tell him whatever he wants that's what I'll pay him." And Fairfield hung up the phone. Sometimes you just had to be tough with people.

It was about midnight that Jennifer came home from her date crying. Both Fairfield and Alison, in bed, grabbed their robes and came downstairs.

"It's Charlie," she sobbed.

"What did he do?" Alison asked.

"It's not what HE did. It's what SOMEBODY ELSE did. I drove Charlie home in our convertible from the movie, and his house just wasn't there. It was gone. Charlie was so upset. He said just leave him there. He'd stay with some friends. He kept saying I'VE LIVED HERE ALL MY LIFE. I'VE LIVED HERE ALL MY LIFE."

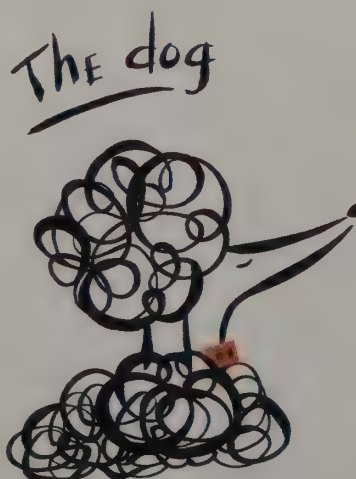

"That's drugs," Fairfield said.

"But dad," Jennifer said.

"Jennifer come with me," Alison said. "We're going up to your room. I want to talk to you again about dating some of these local boys."

It was at 5 am the next morning that the household was awakened by the sound of people talking outside. Fairfield got out of bed and peered out the window. There were flashing lights, trucks, and in the dim light, the shape of a wonderful old farmhouse. Joy leaped in his heart.

"Alison! Alison! It's HERE. The farmhouse is HERE."

Alison and Fairfield dressed in record time and they raced downstairs and out the front door to greet this huge swarm of people on their front lawn. The first person they saw was the broker.

"What do you think?" he grinned.

"How did you do this?" Fairfield shouted, jumping up and down.

"Where do you want it?" the broker laughed. "Over here? Over there?"

Fairfield was directing the house-mover and his crew over to the other side of the pool when through the pre-dawn darkness he saw an astonishing thing in the upstairs window of the farmhouse. An older man, wearing pajamas and a peaked cap that said JOHN DEERE on it, was looking down at them with a scowl. Then he disappeared for a moment, returned, and brought a cell phone up to his ear.

"Oh shit," the broker said.

The police arrived five minutes later. And with the sound of the sirens, there came the older man, still in his pajamas, out the front door. He walked immediately to the first of the police officers and spoke with him. Meantime, back upstairs at the window, an older woman in pajamas now appeared. Her arms were folded in front of her. In one hand she carried a rolling pin.

"All right sir," the officer said, coming over to Fairfield. "Up against the car, please, hold up your arms and spread your legs."

"Officer..."

"Thank you."

"What are you doing?" Alison said to the policeman, beating him with her fists. "What are you doing to him?"

"Take it easy, m'am" the officer said.

"I thought this was all arranged," Fairfield said, turning his head to look at the broker.

"We agreed at a million six," the broker said, his voice quivering.

"I said a BILLION six," the farmer shouted. "I told you I would part with my place for a billion six and not a penny less and so what do you think of that?"

"Who the hell do you think you are?" Alison shouted at the farmer.

"Who do you think YOU are?" the farmer shouted back.

"Slow down, everybody," the officer said.

Both Jennifer and Willie now appeared in their pajamas on the lawn. They looked on in amazement.

"Somebody just tell me where to put this house," the man with the big truck said.

And then Jennifer screamed. Standing in the front door of the farmhouse, now, his hair askew and rubbing his eyes, was her boyfriend Charlie. He too was in his pajamas. She ran to him.

"I found my house," he said.

Willie walked to his father, still spread eagle against the police car. "Does this mean none of my friends can come down from school?"

* * *

On Sunday afternoon, as Caressa and Roberto were getting the family ready to leave for the city, the phone rang in the Sampson household, and Fairfield took it.

"Hi," the broker said. "I think I've got you another farmhouse. Care to see it?"

Fairfield thought back to the events of the previous two days, and he thought of the checks he had had to write. He had paid seven police fines. He had paid the housemovers to move the farmhouse to his property and then he had paid him again to move it back to where it came from. And he had paid two landscape companies double-time to restore the lawn, coming in on an emergency basis on Saturday.

About the only person he had not paid, though he had offered to, was the farmer. The farmer said all he just wanted was his farmhouse back where it was. That would be just fine.

"No," Fairfield said to the broker. Then he hung up.

Biggest Resort

A plan for what is expected to be the largest resort in the world was unveiled this week by the United Arab Emirates. They plan to build 40 luxury hotels and 2,000 villas in a palm tree design in the desert that will be visible from the moon.

Art Auction

An auction last Tuesday at Sothebys in Manhattan brought out many bidders and was a great success, particularly for some of the late painters and sculptors of the Hamptons. Many of the buyers and sellers were Hamptonites. Larry Gagosian bought Bathroom, painted by Roy Lichtenstein in 1961 from S. I. Newhouse Jr. for $2.7 million. Three bidders battled to buy Black and White / No. 6, 1951 painted by Jackson Pollock when he was living in the Springs. It was finally sold to an unidentified phone bidder for a record $7.9 million. Several Andy Warhol pieces – the late painter had a home in Montauk – also were sold for sums that exceeded estimates. The painting Group of Five Campbell's Soup Cans, done in 1962, was sold by the descendants of Karl Stroher of Darmstadt, Germany, for $3.7 million. Less well known Warhol pieces went in excess of $300,000, nearly triple the approximately $120,000 estimates.

Sheriffs Sale

A major oceanfront mansion on West End Road in East Hampton may shortly be sold off in a Suffolk County sheriff sale. The property was owned by the late Jack Rounick, who made a rent-sale arrangement to sell it for $7 million over time to a physician, Dr. Feldstein. With that deal not quite completed several years later, Dr. Feldstein went into contract to sell the mansion for $10 million to Hard Rock Hotel founder Peter Morton. This did not please Jack Rounick who then agreed to sell the property to Manhattan real estate developer Sheldon Solow for the same $7 million that he had earlier seemed to have sold it to Dr. Feldstein for.

Now, nearly 10 years later, the matter has made its way through the courts and a decision has been reached that the sale to Dr. Feldstein and therefore to Peter Morton is the legal transaction. Solow, who has the deed, has been living in the house all this time and has been feuding famously with his neighbor lifestyle guru Martha Stewart over out buildings, property lines and landscaping, was supposed to hand over the deed to the court on April 10 but failed to do so. A motion has now been set for the Suffolk County sheriff to execute the deed to Peter Morton.

Number 1 thru 5

East Hampton Village has been declared the priciest place to live on the east end by Worth Magazine, with a median home sale price of $977,500. Second is Water Mill, third is Bridgehampton, fourth is Southampton Village, fifth is Amagansett and sixth is Quogue.

He has spent most of his life involved in peace missions to promote mutual understanding between Arabs and Jews in the Middle East. He most recently brought five amputees to the US from war torn Sierra Leone to be fitted for prosthesis and to receive rehabilitation at his own expense. He is planning a fundraiser in the Hamptons this August 25th to raise monies for a rehabilitation center in the free zone of Sierra Leone, so that all the victims of the civil war can receive free medical treatment and prosthesis. In his spare time, he likes to watch movies at home with his wife, their deliciously fluffy child Diva, and any friends who happen to wander by at showtime. They also happen to serve excellent iced coffee.

EXIT

The Rich-Clinton Factor

by C.J. Squires

Summer is here and the time is right for dancing in the streets, intimate dinner parties and more charity events than weekends have room for. It seems this summer we have a lot of disharmony among the elite summer crowd and sometimes the locals are having disharmony with the elite. Alec Baldwin has been having so much press lately and the fickle fans are not making it easy for him. At a Town Board Planning Board meeting in Amagansett, he delivered a long, informed plea to stop the permit being issued to the Bistrian Golf Club in East Hampton to construct a clubhouse and parking lot. The local crowd wouldn't ease up with jeers and catcalls. It seems they feel he does not have the right to air his opinions. Hmm...last time we checked, that is a hard won right we give all our citizens.

Another person who is not going to have it easy is Denise Rich. Ms. Rich has quickly become a household name.

BALDWIN

BILL CLINTON, MAN ABOUT TOWN AND DENISE RICH, HOSTESS OF THE RICH AND FAMOUS

All we can really be sure of is that she was definitely at the right place at the wrong time. Her personal list of friends is a Who's Who of the political and entertainment world. Can she survive the talk about her and still come out here to play? Her dinner parties are legendary and have included the Who's Who of All Who Are In The News. This season she could have Mr. Clinton, Al Sharpton (who would love to see her on his staff, especially if he became Mayor...oh...oh...Mayor?), ex-husband Marc, (who does have time on his hands now that he's back in the country), Luciano Pavarotti, Mike Wallace, Bill Cosby and just about anyone else to whom she would extend an invitation. Her support in the N.Y. social community is unwavering.

We have heard of another problem arising in the social set of the Dune Baby crowd. A name we like to give our younger set who have been born with a silver spoon in their mouths and ocean sand on their toes. Clubs like Jet East, Conscience Point and the Red Bar are packed tight with a rich assortment of this set. Paris and Nicky Hilton, summer residents going back three generations, have been making headlines all year. They are beautiful, young, blonde, and very aware that their every movement is watched and photographed. They dress only in Haute Couture and are famous for mixing up all the styles into eye-catching ensembles.

But there's going to be a clash when they run into Stella and Lola Schnabel. These two beauties are the daughters of Julian Schnabel, who moved the family clan into a great 10 bedroom Stanford White house in Montauk. These baby jet setters have been known to be a bit competitive around the night club scene and have openly aired their opinions about each other. Now if all of this appears to be just heresay...

Miles Jaffe's (son of the famed architect Norman Jaffe, who we lost after he drowned in the Ocean at Bridgehampton) can help fill in the blanks and give you plenty of ammunition to do it. Are you ready for this...a video game geared to the "I Hate The Hamptons" crowd (oh, dear)...you get to shoot missiles at the landmark houses of Martha Stewart, Ron Perelman, Jerry Dellla Femina and probably us, if Mr. Jaffe reads this.

After examining the game, we did like one of the targets...when we see it completed (when ever that will be?) the Ira Rennert's headquarters in Sagaponack is tempting to, as Miles put it, be "vaporized". Talk about eliminating the unnecessary. The Dupont twins are coming clean with a their tell-all book entitled Two Heads Are Better Than One. This is probably a good title because we like to think it would have had to take two heads to outsmart every single person out here to believe they actually were Duponts. Their real name...Lasko. Last time we checked the name Lasko was not on any A-List, but they sure gave the name Dupont a good run. Wasn't there someone named Rockefeller who did the same thing last year or was it the year before? ■

Bridged...

She had to remember these long bicyclic trips. She'd pack the prerequisites: bottle of water, a small jar of sunscreen, some chapstick with sunblock and a couple of those Harvest power bars. That would hold her until she arrived. She'd head out at dawn, before the really aggressive drivers got on the road. Early morning was her favorite time of day. She favored the dawn, but she preferred the cool morning air. She could reach her favorite resting place by one, maybe two o'clock in the afternoon when the hot afternoon sun would reach its zenith making her ready for shade and a long, cool drink of water. Inevitably there would be a fly buzzing drunkenly around her head while she found her spot in the shade. To her, it is worth the trip, just to see the covered bridge. In that moment all the tensions of the city dissolve and she knows, beyond a doubt, that she is home. ■

GOLFING

Ann Ligouri Charity Golf Outing

By Roy Bradbrook

For the fourth year running the annual Ann Ligouri Charity Golf Outing held at the Westhampton Country Club was a complete sellout with 150 players mixing pleasure with raising money for a very worthy cause. Marla Schwenk is the Director of Special Events for the Eastern Division of the American Cancer Society, headquartered in Southampton. "This is an event which has gone from strength to strength and we are deeply indebted to Ann for all the work she puts into this event to make it such a financial success for our charity," she told me. "Every year, Ann persuades so many of her celebrity friends to take part and this has been one of the reasons why so many of our patrons come back each year and why the event sells out."

Among the celebrities taking part in this year's golf tournament were two very well known comedians, Freddy Roman, who also is President of the Friars Club, and Dick Capri. Both wowed audiences in the hit revue, Catskills on Broadway. From the music world came Gary U.S. Bonds of Rock and Roll fame and sporting celebrities, including football star Freeman McNeil and baseball great Tommy John, the first pitcher to make a successful recovery from the major shoulder surgery which today bears his name. Author Mike Celezic, Dave Marr from the Golf Channel, C.J. Pappa from Channel 55 Sports and the real Kenny Kramer on whom the 'Seinfeld' character was modeled and who is a writer and comedian, gave their whole-hearted support to the event which just managed to beat the onset of the rain that day.

The tournament sponsors included AT&T Wireless, which also donated the first prize for the winning team, North Fork Bank, Outback Steakhouse, the Ronald McDonald House Charities, which were so impressed with the people here and the event that they have decided to significantly increase their sponsorship contribution for next year's event, Marsh Private Client Services, the Hamptons may soon enjoy a new all weather, all season putting green. Talking to Ann Ligouri after the event she commented on how much this green has helped her to improve her short game and she also told me that Fuzzy Zoeller and John Daly both have these greens in their own homes.

Another center of interest during the evening was the video camera and slow motion replay equipment which Yes! Golf from Denver had installed to show participants how its revolutionary new Yes! Putter with a specially grooved face helps to ensure that the ball immediately starts to roll after impact with the putter whereas a conventional putter almost always makes the ball skid or even lift off the ground. The Yes! Putter materially assists golfers to hit their putts on line and to keep the ball running truly towards and hopefully into the hole!

All of the players in the tournament left with a new Yes! Putter as a gift from Yes!

Golf, so next year expect the scores here to be even lower than usual! Golfers were also presented with a golf cooler bag filled with many gifts including a copy of Ann Ligouri's latest book on golfing at wonderful courses in Ireland. They also took home a newly designed golf umbrella, which they hope not to need to use too often in the future. The main thing they will have taken home with them, though, is the memory of a fun day with good companionship and above all else of helping The American Cancer Society, a charity which deserves total support in its continuing fight against cancer and its comfort to those fighting the disease.

On the evening before the tournament, Ann Ligouri and Steve Geller were the hosts at their charming home in Westhampton for a party to honor the celebrities, sponsors and committee members through whose hard and dedicated involvement the tournament has become such a success. The guests enjoyed the opportunity to try the brand new state of the art synthetic pitching and putting green installed by PlayersTurf International of Peoria Illinois. GOLFING

Love proves adept at incorporating optical illusions into his design. A slanting mound of earth behind a creek blocks the green from view, revealing only the top half of the flag stick. Confounding perception even further are a pair of tall pines, which from the tee box appears to spring up behind the mound, but actually is way out of harm's way, behind the green. A very clever and disconcerting set of illusions complicate what otherwise is a pretty routine hole.

Then there's the finishing hole, where things really get weird. It's almost as if after 17 holes of sophisticated obedience to orthodoxy, Love decided to let his hair grow a bit. This 500-yard par 5 starts out over wetlands and doglegs to the right. But the two segments of the fairway are, get this, on separate levels and at oblique angles to each other. So if your second shot comes from the right side, you are forced to hit up and over a bunker-pocked slope to reach the next stretch of fairway. Should you navigate this portion of the hole successfully, hold that exhale. The green is 35 yards deep and so undulant you feel as if the Atlantic is swelling beneath your feet. A provocative hole to end a terrific golf course.

There are several restaurants to choose from on the island, the most notable being The Beach Club Restaurant. A relaxed, casual atmosphere pervades the dining room. As is the norm around Fripp Island, the menu is contemporary, while the prices seem happily stuck in the 1980s. Particularly good this night was filet of beef with peppercorns over risotto. Cheesecake in a strawberry mousse was an otherworldly pleasure for dessert.

Golf the next day takes you from the beautiful and serene Ocean Creek to the sometimes majestic, sometimes scruffy Ocean Point. The layout boasts two powerhouse holes of inordinate aesthetic quality. At the dogleg par-4 ninth, there is water to the left (a pond) and major water beyond the bend in the fairway (an ocean). The elevated tee box drinks it all in and the view is breathtaking. The offshore wind can be enormously tricky on this one, in your face on the tee and at your back on approach. The opening to the green is quite narrow, with two traps severely restricting the angle to the flag when the pin is up. This beautiful and demanding hole could be played all day without a trace of boredom.

The 18th also vies for signature hole honors. Off an elevated woodlands tee into a beautiful rolling fairway with a green seemingly out at sea, this 486-yard par 5 finishing hole is pure golf bliss. On approach, there is water left and right and the sand trap guarding the left side of the green has a lip that crests as formidably as the waves breaking just beyond.

As difficult as Ocean Point is, oddly enough it is a wonderful course for introducing the game to the young'uns. This, thanks to its designation as a "Wee Links" course. Tee boxes are unobtrusively set up on every hole from par 3 distance, enabling kids to learn to play around the green without having to launch the ball to get there.

Such attention to cultivating a family-friendly environment is typical of the resort. A whole slate of activities caters to kids interests. There are tennis clinics and swim lessons, bicycle rentals and canoe tours. A fossil-finding expedition to the beach might even put the kids in the mood for the shell crafts program. For teens there is a bowling alley, movie theater and volleyball courts.

Be certain, on departure day, to save some time for a sublime urban hike. Charleston is simultaneously one of the country's most soberly historical cities as well as one of the most vividly colorful. The city's beautiful residences encompass an encyclopedia of architectural styles. And yet it is quite easy to lose track that you are in a realm of wood frames and cobblestone. Flowers spring out of window boxes and fill sidewalk urns. Sneak a peak down an alley way and you might catch a glimpse of leafy vines caressing the sides of pastel-colored Victorians.

Check your watch. Have some time for a bite before your flight? By all means head for East Bay Street. Many of the top restaurants in a great restaurant town are along here and serve casual lunches.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Now that we have gotten past the rain and the busy Memorial Day weekend, we can sort of get on with lives. I can anyway, let's do some shopping.

A quick stop at the Feather Hill Commons on Rt. 25 in Southold to check out what was going on at the "Warehouse Sale" at Tennis by Tee-Wear...This sale is exclusively for tennis apparel, tennis jewelry and resort wear with a savings of 50% to 70% off retail prices. Get ready for this one it starts on Thursday, May 24 at 10 a.m. and runs through Saturday June 2. Think Father's Day!

Are you looking for made-to-order and ready-to-wear special occasion clothing? At Lon Sabella et Daniel on Moniebogue lane in Westhampton you will find just that and more. They are also offering one of the most extensive collections of accessories and signature jewelry.

For flagpoles of distinction, installed, repaired, maintained and site consultations, check out Nautique National Flag on Montauk Highway in Westhampton Beach. There is quite a selection of custom flags, banners and burgees, weathervanes and cupolas and lots of accessories. Love this shop!

At Porch & Patio on Montauk Highway in East Quogue you will find a Brown Jordan sale-a-thon. This store features all major brand names such as, Char-Broil, Lawn Comfort, Pompeii, Gloster, Grosfillex and much more. John bought a beautiful patio set (Roma Strap) and it was delivered to his home the very next day.

Don't miss out on the Lancôme promotion special exclusively at Saks Fifth Avenue in Southampton. Spend only $25 or more and get a chic lizard print cosmetic case filled with great Lancôme products. I never miss these specials.

You know that teak is in and a brand new shipment of quality grade teak furniture has arrived to The John Rogers Outlet on Main Street in Southampton. The shipment direct for their factory in Java is ready for you to take home and set up on your deck or patio. One of my favorites is the Rose loveseat ($499 assembled) and armchair ($319 assembled).

You know that Casual Home on County Road 39 in Southampton is celebrating its' sixteenth year. This is the place for casual, classic and comfy home furnishings that include sofas, beds, tables, chairs, entertainment centers, counter and bar stools and fabulous accessories.

Nearby at Carpet One Of The Hamptons there are hot savings with a 50% off remnant sale. Now is the time to plan covering your floors and saving lots of cash!

At Zabi's Wine & Liquors on North Highway in Southampton look for a 10% discount on the purchase of one case of wine, 15% on two cases or more. Here you will find a tremendous selection of California Cabernet, Sauvignon Blanc, Chardonnay, Merlot, Point Noir and much more. You can mix or match with the same discount. How about that!

Don't miss Marder's 25% off sale on azaleas, flowering cherries, and pears, magnolias, shrub lilacs, crabapples, forsythias and more.

Are you looking for something special to control the sun in your home? You can save your carpet and furniture from the damaging effects of sunlight with a new line of solar screening shades that are available in twelve different fabrics. They are custom crafted, one-of-a-kind, energy efficient window treatments in clutch or motorized shades. This product is available at Janovic on Montauk Highway in Wainscott. Give them a call for information at 537-9700.

I stopped into Gems of the Past on Park Place in East Hampton and found the most beautiful Edwardian style necklace in platinum, emeralds and diamonds. I want it!

My co-worker Jill told me about a wonderful therapeutic massage that she got after working so hard on the Memorial Day week. She had a Swedish, sports, medical, shiatsu, reiki, prenatal, craniosacral, ayurvedic facials and reflexology. Jill felt so much better, she couldn't wait to get back to work. Yeah right! Give Jeanne Ann Karfo a call at 516-386-3366, she will be happy to help you too.

Got to run, I have an appointment with Arline's Salon In Motion...formally Arline's Salon at the Omni. She comes right to your doorstep and makes you beautiful. Arline offers the same services that she had at the Salon at the Omni. Give her a call for an appointment at 516-652-1047 or 369-3434.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Summer Shopping!

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Did you hear the one about the bachelor who told his friend he just bought his girlfriend an ersatz diamond ring. His friend said, "I thought she wanted an SUV." The bachelor answered, "She did, but I couldn't find a fake Jeep."

Whoever came up with this silly joke, (have you ever wondered where jokes originate?) didn't realize that there are many fake cars, and even SUVs. In fact next year, General Motors, who recently purchased the rights to use the product name "Hummer" will actually be making a fake look-alike American General Hummer.

The most common counterfeit cars are replicas of famous sports cars, with the 1960s Ford Cobra being the most popular. I actually feel sorry for the hapless car collector who owns a genuine Cobra. The reality of the matter is that everyone who sees his rare $250,000 machine will think it's a $25,000 fake. I remember being at the Neurberg Ring in Germany for what they call "Oldtimer's Day," an event for vintage cars. Driving around the paddocks was a bare aluminum 427 Cobra. Because it was aluminum and not fiberglass, it was obvious that it was a real Cobra. I've always wondered if the owner hadn't had the time to finish the restoration, or was he just showing everyone that he was driving a proper and genuine vintage race car.

A friend of mine living in Amagansett owns another car that is a popular fake; a 1955 Porsche Speedster. I told Dick to get vanity plates that say "TTSREAL," but instead he put a set of rare factory original Rudge knock-off wheels on the car. (Don't get confused by the term "knock-off"; they are real wheels, you just use a mallet to knock off the center hub when removing the wheel) The wheels themselves are worth about $10,000, the price of a good Porsche Speedster Replica.

Another popular fake car is the Shelby 1965-66 Ford Shelby GT-350. This car's easy to fake because visually, all Carroll Shelby did to the original cars was to take a stock Ford fastback coupe and do some minor body modifications, like a triangular side window, a fiberglass hood, an instrument pod and mag wheels. You can find all the parts you need in Hemmings Motor Magazine for around $1,500. Many fake Shelbys, which are worth considerably more than a stock Ford fastback, have been passed off as real. Be very careful when buying a used GT-350. Check its serial numbers with Shelby experts.

Like fine art, when a car becomes very valuable, one has to be leery of counterfeits. Several years ago there were several fake Ferrari race cars being sold on the park your car, and we'll take you down to the water about three blocks from here and pick you up at the end of the rental period," said Doug. Aside from time, the rental cost depends upon which boat you choose. A tandem, for example, runs $30 for two hours and singles start at $17 for two hours or $25 for a half-day and all include the roundtrip to the water and back.

"I recommend, especially for beginners, that they don't plan on going for more than half a day. I tell them, Sign up for a half and, when I come down to get you, you can decide to stay the other half and pay me when you get back," said Doug.

This year, in response to summer resident requests, Doug is even getting into leasing boats for one, two or world market. They were perfect replicas of the real cars.

One has to understand that today in Italy and England there are 'bodymen who are geniuses in forming metal bodies in steel or aluminum. Because race cars are crude to begin with, it's relatively easy to fabricate them. Find a wrecked Ferrari with the right engine and instruments, and voila, instant four million dollar race car. Some very good detective work by some suspicious car experts exposed the fakes. Today you may see ads for certain model rare Ferraris as "re-creations."

There are other types of fake cars all around us today. There must be thousands of Mercedes 560SLs that are really rebadged, humble 350SLs. What about all those rice-rocket Honda Civics with lowered bodies, fat exhaust pipes and Japanese decals to make them look like race cars? (For the record, that's called "slamming" a car. Why on earth, I don't know!) Anyway, those cars are fake. They don't go any faster than a librarian's daily driver Honda.

Another form of fakery is a trend that was first started by Range Rover. That was adorning SUVs with all sorts of "Rhino Bars" and metal protrusions. This was to protect the car off road, as in the outback and wilds of Africa. Now almost every SUV in the Hamptons has them. For what reason? To protect one's self from the blond in the bikini top walking across Jobs Lane? Fake machismo!

The next time you see a fancy, swoopy, gleaming car in the Hamptons that reeks of exclusivity and class, ask yourself these questions. Is the car a fake? How about the guy driving it?

Bob Gelber, an automotive journalist living in the Hamptons, appears frequently on television as an automotive expert. You can email him at remsenburg@aol.com in our Day by Day calendar of events.

Not easily perturbed by the unstable stock market conditions, Doug remains calm in the face of uncertainty. When asked how he feels about the future of his business here in Southold, he replies with typical candor. "I'm not going to rent space in my head worrying over what might happen. I just take it a day at a time. The business has grown every year and I attribute this to our emphasis on service," said Doug, who can't help but add with a smile, "There are more second homeowners here on the North Fork now that the South Fork is sold out. It's just like water seeking its level!"

Located across from the Gulf station on the Main Road in Southold. 765-3502.

BLOWN AWAY

By Ben Amato

A constant submerged battle of philosophy and ego separate sailors from powerboaters. Drivers in their testosterone stinkpots spew gasoline and diesel exhaust into the faces of ragmen, as they cut across their bows at expressway speeds. But sailors also pollute the air too, with their curses, insults and venom directed at jetskiers, cigarette boats and anything propelled by more than fifteen horsepower.

The first leg of the Blown Away voyage took three days, covered a bit more than three miles and had me arriving at one universal truth: wind power depends upon motors. Before any dock lines are cast away, there's the trip to Motor Vehicle for trailer plates, title transfers and hours wasted. More time was lost idling in Mount Sinai traffic, heading to and from the harbor where Orange Crush was moored. Finally, Fran Nilsen brought his orange hulled ship to the town dock, handed over the keys and Murphy and his laws took over.

The motor wouldn't start. Then the rains came along with the fog and thunderstorms. Port Jefferson seemed like an ocean away. Town of Brookhaven Supervisor John LaValle was gracious, allowing us to stay at the town's fine facilities until the kinks were ironed out. But we had to promise him a ride on the ship. No problem. Visitors are always welcome.

So we cleaned and shined and stocked the ship with essentials. A trip to a West Marine provided a valuable tool for this summer's voyage, a credit card to a boat store that has everything, including a lot of my money. (B.O.A.T. stands for Bring Out Another Thousand.) Fran came down to offer help in coaxing the 9.9 Johnson back to life but that added the first mystery to this trip. With the engine cover off, the motor purred. Pop the lid on and it died. The trip to Port Jeff would be topless, but not in the manner I hoped.

Sunday offered a break in the weather and after a morning fog was blown across the Sound towards Connecticut, Deborah Ferguson, Guy Santostefano and I made a dash out of the harbor and raised the main sail for the first time. The ship came alive. The twenty-four year old Pearson was responsive, agile, tight, rock steady and quick, behaving like, well, a twenty year old. Dozens of fishermen crowded the mouth of Mt. Sinai Harbor. The fish must have been biting. A few other sailboats dotted the horizon. One of the Port Jeff ferries broke through a fog bank that loomed to the north but blue skies and smooth waters made the trip west too brief.

The bluffs of Belle Terre has huge mansions overlooking the Sound and the pink, sprawling home of "The Countess" stood royal, next to Point Misery and the county park that borders the harbor. The stacks of the LIPA powerplant guided us into the bay and we made our way to Dansford's.

"We are a stop along the way for most boaters," said Steward Weiner, general manager of Dansford's on the Sound. "Ships on the way to Rhode Island, Newport and Montauk pull in for dinner, fuel or the excitement of the town. From time to time, tall ships arrive and these draw a crowd. The most exciting is the HMS Rose, a replica of a British warship. A couple of weeks ago the Mimi pulled in. This was a German ship from the 1930's. It was used to smuggle Jews out of Germany before war and later the Germans captured it and used it as a transport. After the war the British took ownership and now it is in private hands. It's a tall ship, all wood and it holds so much history. A few movies used her. Some schools took field trips here to see her."

Two dockhands, Brian and Adam, made Crush secure at a waiting slip and we were greeted by Carrie Rubino. This is her second summer season as Dansford's dockmaster and she loves the atmosphere. She handles the seventy-five slips with her crew of eight, seven days a week, making sure everyone is secure, well stocked and cared for. "I've managed a restaurant and a hotel but this is very different. There, people come and go. Here at Dansford's, you live with them. I've been a dockmaster down in Philadelphia and Ocean Beach, on Fire Island, and the regulars here are the best," said Carrie. "I don't have one or two favorites. I have about ten. These are happy people."

There are shower rooms, luxurious bathrooms, the Inn offers fine waterfront dining at 25 East-American Bistro, a conference center and eighty-five New England style guest rooms, if you prefer sleeping in a bed, not a berth. When we docked, there was live music coming from their outdoor café and the place was electric, with crowds of tourists enjoying the Port Jefferson scene.

"This place is unique," said Peter Lamas, owner of a sparkling new 58 foot Bayliner, the Island Princess. "You come in and dock and you have the excitement of a town, steps away. Port Jeff is the best. There's always something happening, the shopping, the restaurants and you can get drunk in the best bars."

Dockmaster Carrie loves the water, but does not own a boat herself. "I like the old working ships, like the wooden lobster boats. My brother just bought one, refurbishing it and bringing it to the South Shore. It's his new toy. But my favorite thing is to hang out with my son. He's turning eighteen and about to graduate. I'm taking a three day vacation soon and we're heading up to New England." This seems strange because Port Jefferson and Dansford's has a New England type flavor rarely seen on Long Island. With her work schedule you would think she'd want to escape this style of living.

The next stop for the Orange Crush is Mattituck, the Matt-a-Mar Marina and if the weather holds and the engine starts, we should be there by the weekend. Thanks goes out to all who helped kick off this trip and also to Bruce, who is the first reader to write in with a suggestion.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

GROUP SHOW AT CLAYTON-LIBERATORE

There's a strong sense of being at home when one enters Bridgehampton's Clayton-Liberatore Gallery, which is no big surprise because the art space is, in fact, where Mary Liberatore also resides. The welcoming ambience, therefore, provides an alternative to those galleries which are intimidating at the very least.

The current exhibit seems at home on the walls as well. Even so, two artists, particularly, offer pieces that we haven't seen before. Consider Bill Negron's prints and paintings, selected for this show because no one has seen them previously. In one way, they still possess Mr. Negron's fine sensibility for content and craftsmanship where subject matter and design form a perfect partnership.

However, the artist's musical series appears more mythological in origin than Mr. Negron's current works, while his paintings that feature his signature bicycle motif are reminders of his vivid imagination. They also reinforce the idea that some work is very personal, that the freedom-loving feelings generated by his fluidity are, in fact, very much like Mr. Negron himself.

Amy Ernst's art is personal, too, this current series devoted to her continuing psychological and spiritual evolution, as was her previous show at the Clayton-Liberatore Gallery. Some aspects are the same: often a frame-within-a-frame concept, a metaphor perhaps for her trying to capture herself. Current works ("Beachwalk 2") signify a "window on the world" approach as the artist sees herself reflected in her environment. Missing are Ms. Ernst's figures from the past, although we sense their (her) presence anyway.

Ernst's Collage

Other artists are not as psychologically-based, but their pieces are no less personal. Take, for example, Frieda Abbey's landscapes, evoking diverse moods (moody and dark vs. uplifting and light) — perhaps mirroring her own states of mind at the time. The titles also reflect another juxtaposition, general vs. specific, ("Dawn" vs. "Hills of Montauk") which allows viewers to use their own imaginations when enjoying the landscapes.

Other works promote interaction between spectators and particular pieces: Margaret Weissbach's monotypes (especially "Rocky Shore" and "House By the Bay"); Dawn Schabner's "Blue Moon," a subtle and well designed print; and Karen Barsalona's "By the Sea #7," where images of horses remind us of Mr. Negron's mythological vision.

This show, while closed, merited documentation.

HONORING THE COVER ARTIST: MARY LYNN BLASUTTA

Mary Lynn Blasutta's cover on this week's Dan's can't help but get your attention — which is what the artist had in mind. And if it also recalls an illustration which might appear in The New Yorker, that was the artist's intention as well.

Most of Ms. Blasutta's varied illustrations are equally sophisticated and witty: stylized female figures adorned with telltale objects of affluence (like sling-back bedroom slippers), surrounded by chic perfume bottles.

Yet we can't help but realize that these images poke gentle fun at the figures, too.

Ms. Blasutta has a first-hand knowledge of affluence and stylization; her past achievements include designing the Christmas window for Barneys in New York as well as for its world-wide stores. Yet her wit couldn't be denied even then. Consider the dinner party scene which contained a poodle licking Sophia Loren's toes, images which were both drawn and photographed (Ms. Loren's head).

Ms. Blasutta also had a bout with advertising, namely designing the mural for New York's Sixth Avenue store of Bed, Bath and Beyond. "It was a bit unnerving to look up and see my mural ten feet high and a whole city block long," she recalls with a laugh.

Another achievement seems a bit different from the chic world of clothes and accessories: designing visuals for the Bell Atlantic phone book, a project that started in 1996 and ended one thousand images later. Ms.

One can recover quickly from the damp chill of Memorial Day weekend by enjoying any of the entertainment planned for this week. Some of the highlights: WNBC-TV film critic Jeffrey Lyons joins filmmaker/commentator Roberta Burrows on Friday evening at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center to screen and chat about a new film. Richie Havens will sing at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse on Friday night. Weekend benefits include East Hampton dance club NV Tsunami hosting a "Caribbean Nights" party with the Island Boys Band on Saturday for The Retreat, and the Decorators/Designers/Dealers sale for the Southampton Fresh Air Home on Saturday and Sunday.

There is also professional theater, interesting speakers, and more music around at the restaurants and clubs. For details, read on:

FILM

WNBC-TV film and theater critic Jeffrey Lyons will be screening a new film and chatting afterwards with filmmaker/commentator Roberta Burrows on Friday, 7:30 p.m. in the "Talking Movies" program at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. Tickets are $30 for the evening ($25 if you are a WHBPAC Film Society member). To reserve a seat, call the box office at 631-288-1500 from Wednesday on between noon and 5 p.m.

Dan's Papers' "They Made the Movie Here" series continues at East Hampton's Ross School Library Theater on Saturday at 2 p.m. Woody Allen's serious film Interiors will be shown. There is no admission charge, but seating is limited so please call the newspaper at 631-537-0500 to reserve a place.

THEATER

Bay Street Theatre's fine production of Cheryl L. West's comedy Jar the Floor continues at the Sag Harbor playhouse. Performances are Tuesday through Sunday evenings with Wednesday and Saturday matinees. This Sunday is Family Day. Children ten and up will be admitted free with a full-paying adult. Tickets ($32-$46) are on sale at the box office Tues. through Sun.,

Take Five 2001 with Jan Silver

10 a.m. until 6 p.m. (631-725-9500) or on the Web at www.boxoffice@baystreet.org.

MUSIC

Singer Richie Havens, whose acoustic performances have continued to draw fans since the original Woodstock Festival, will be at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse on Friday at 8 p.m. followed by the Rhythm Kings at 10 p.m. Saturday at the Talkhouse, singer/songwriter and slide guitarist Sonny Landreth performs at 8 p.m. followed by Felicia on Fire. Leo Nocentelli performs Sun., an open mike for local performers on Mon., and Nil Lara next Thurs., 9 p.m. Space is tight, so call the Talkhouse at 631-276-3117 to reserve tickets.

My choice for mellow listening and dance music at local clubs and restaurants: rock 'n' roll with the Lone Sharks on Thurs. at The Wild Rose (Bridgehampton); jazz and pop classics with Stephanie Cardinali, Paul Gene and Rick Salter at Oyster Pond (Montauk) on Fri. and World Pie (Bridge.) for Sunday brunch; Todd Michaels (Sat.) and Diana Rogers (Sun. aft.) at the Maidstone Arms (East Hampton); Hunky Page on piano at the American Hotel (Sag Harbor).

SPEAKERS

Richard Barons, director of the Southampton Historical Museum, will give a talk with slides about Samuel Parrish and Southampton Village at the new Southampton library on Cooper's Farm Rd., 7 p.m., Friday. The next morning, he will conduct a walking tour of the sites in his talk from 8 to 9:30 a.m.

David Ebershoff, publishing director of The Modern

Library, will read from his new short story collection The Rose City on Saturday, 5:30 p.m., upstairs at Book Hampton, East Hampton (Main St.). "Portraits and Self-Portraits," a six-month project for selected Pierson High School students working with art teacher Joe Bartolatto and artist-in-residence Peter Solow, will be shown at Canio's Books, Upper Main St., Sag Harbor, on Saturday at 6 p.m.

BENEFITS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

The Nature Benefit, a combined fund-raiser for the local chapter of The Nature Conservancy and the Group for the South Fork, is a cocktail party and preview of "Land and Sea," the new group show opening at the Elaine Benson Gallery in Bridgehampton on Friday, 5 p.m. For tickets, call The Nature Conservancy at 631-329-7689 or Group for the South Fork at 631-537-1400.

Manhattan and South Fork interior designers, furniture and art dealers donate a load of new merchandise for an auction and sale to benefit the Southampton Fresh Air Home for boys and girls each year. The event begins on Saturday, 6 p.m., at the Home with a cocktail party and auction (call 631-283-5847 for tickets). Sunday, the sale is open to the public from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

The Retreat, a local non-profit organization aiding families and victims of domestic violence, is the beneficiary of the "Caribbean Nights" party on Saturday from 7 to 10 p.m. at NV Tsunami, the spacious dance club at 44 Three Mile Harbor Rd., East Hampton. There will be music from Island Boys Band, an open bar, hors d'oeuvres and raffle prizes. Admission is a $75 donation (or $100 at the door). For tickets, call 631-329-4398 or e-mail to theretreat@hamptons.com.

Next Saturday, June 9, the annual "Garden Gala" for the Body Positive, an HIV/AIDS assistance organization, takes place at the oceanfront home of Jerry Della Femina and Judy Licht in East Hampton from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. There is food, drink and entertainment at the party. Admission is a $125 donation. For more information, call Shirley Scully at 212-566-7333 ext. 23.

"They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2001

THE SPRINGS IS THE SCENE OF A VIOLENT TABLE TURNING OF ART

It is fitting that the final film of this season's Movies Made Here, is one that was not only filmed here but one that also represents this area as a fertile environment for Art as well as corn and potatoes.

A massive, blank spread of canvas lies floored and meaningless . . . in minutes it comes to life, fabulously. Whip-like splashes of color, directed by the artist standing above it, dominates the white wasteland. . . broadcasting art into the sterile conformity. These enlightening moments make it mandatory to see, Pollock, realizing the creative act, as it does, better than the real thing, shot in the 1940's by Hans Namuth, in the small unassuming studio in East Hampton's Springs.

Jackson Pollock's true story was as corrosive as his enamels. However, it spills rather too comfortably onto the big screen in small TV screen, Bio Pic fashion. As revolutionary and free-form as Mr. Pollock's art is, the movie is unfortunately colored in outlined, numbered forms as produced, directed and wonderfully performed by Ed Harris with admirable and sincere modesty which must be the nature of this fine actor. This may account for some of the vacancies left in the film and the man it depicts, since he is in direct contrast to the actual Pollock image of surly, macho-ambition . . . whose violent drinking forebode his fatalistic, tortured, early demise. Left standing, though, was his uncompromising associate in art and in life. . . wife and confidant, Lee Krasner, whose metallic strength functioned like the ferrule of a brush that holds the bristles together. Of course, Pollock grew not to rely on brushes alone.

Here on the East End, with relics of an important part of their lives in our midst, we tend to be overly possessive of the Pollock/Krasner iconography. Since Mr. Harris first began the film process, by immersing himself in the project, it has been front page news and, of near National Enquirer interest on these expensive dunes. It reminds me somewhat of the small town out West that renamed itself, Jim Thorpe, after the legendary Native American died there. His family, believing his remains must rest in his native soil, want him returned and, the town resolutely refuses . . . his tomb has made the town. It is to our credit that as yet there are no Pollock ash trays . . . in Calvin Klein jeans for East Hampton and a yellow sou'wester behind a ship's wheel for Sag Harbor. Consider that the formidable Pollock retrospective at MOMA a while back has remainders of a CD of Pollock's favorite records and fabric swatches of paint swirl designs.

Pollock, the movie, resists glorification and more so, almost never spatters sentimentality. With Marcia Gay Hardin, profiling Ms. Krasner with a performance that is a steely foil for Harris' quite cutting portrayal. They raise the perfunctory aspects of the artist's lives out from the obviousness of the short history, so well known by this art-minded community where Willem de Kooning can just about hold his own against walls and walls of paintings of barns. To this end, similarly, Mr. Harris', Pollock, holds it own as it recreates the Cedar Bar and Farrell's in Brooklyn, replacement brownstones in the Village, for the razed originals where Pollock and Krasner worked and, naturally the Springs. Peggy Guggenheim, Pollock's early patron (pictured so outlandishly in so many recent movies) is a sharp bohemian in Amy Madigan's edged portrayal. Generally, the art scene of the time and its environments are fairly well duplicated and WE, here in Pollock/Krasner country will not be too upset by this production's treatment. Yes, even Pollock's jazz is there... but no Cd's will be on sale at the Ross School or Pollock designer ties. There will be food and drink and stimulating talk on the subject. This is your chance to see Pollock . . . again!

Blasutta explains. "When I was doing those illustrations, my husband, David, liked to tell people, 'You have some of my wife's art in your household. You just don't know it.'"

While Ms. Blasutta considers herself a "one-man band" (she does her own marketing), her impressive art background proves she's an artist first and foremost: a BFA from Columbus School of Art and Design; her experience as a magazine art director in Columbus, Ohio, and New York City; her penchant for Milton Glazer's work as well as for Matisse and Cezanne.

Living in the Midwest, Manhattan, and upstate New York has made Ms. Blasutta appreciate the East End. "We've been here for about a year, and I like it a lot. After all, my husband's family comes from Long Island," she notes.

However, we have the feeling Ms. Blasutta would be finding new ways to incorporate her own stylized figures with wit no matter where she lives. She likes to admit, "I take a little of this and a little of that."

silvia lehrer's cooking column

The International Association of Culinary Professionals hosted its 23rd annual conference in Minneapolis, Minnesota the last week of April. The IACP conference committee planned the agenda while countless food professionals and other volunteers of the Host City organized several social and optional cultural events for the attendees.

On arrival I chose to attend the Corporate Test Kitchen Tour, a behind the scenes look at the contributions of Pillsbury and General Mills whose companies are based in Minneapolis. The theme for the program was proposed as Trend Tracking Presentations. A buffet lunch was served in an in-house theatre at Pillsbury during which we watched an engaging account on film of that mirror of America, the Pillsbury Bake-Off.

In the year 2000, Pillsbury celebrated 50 years of this uniquely American contest, which offers an opportunity for people to express themselves through food. To celebrate the contest's 50th anniversary, more than 350 of the most sought-after recipes were gathered into the Best of the Bake-Off. The Pillsbury Bake-Off Cookbook documents how American cooking has evolved over the years.

After touring the impeccable working test kitchens and learning more about the plethora of products both of these companies offer we met the real Betty Crocker at the General Mills building. At the very least Betty Crocker has been a real person to generations of cooks. So much so that thousands of calls, letters and e-mails for Betty Crocker come into the company every week. In 1945 Betty Crocker's name was second in popularity to First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt. Betty, of course, has never been a real person, yet her name has symbolized the General Mills continuing tradition of service. After a walk through the photography studio at General Mills, the bright lights of professional cameras focusing on the food that was being styled and photographed, our tour ended in the gallery where photographs of Betty from 1924 to the present were on display.

The Betty Crocker history is a fascinating one but no more so than the changing Betty Crocker image. Today the face that launched thousands of products has taken on a multi-ethnic, yet all-American look. How appropriate, for she is there to help millions of homemakers who look to her name to make homemade easy.

QUESADILLAS

This Mexican classic is from Betty Crocker's 'Cooking Basics Cookbook.' The simple recipe format is in keeping with the book's subtitle, "Learning to Cook with Confidence."

Makes 6 servings

Essential equipment: cookie sheet or large shallow baking pan (about 15 x 10 inches)

- 1 small tomato
- 3 medium green onions with tops
- 6 flour tortillas (8-10 inches in diameter)
- 2 cups shredded Colby or Cheddar cheese (8 ounces)
- 2 tablespoons chopped green chilies (from a 4-ounce can)
- Chopped fresh cilantro or parsley, if desired

1. Heat the oven to 350 degrees.
2. Chop the tomato. Peel and chop the green onions.

PILLSBURY'S CHOCOLATE PRALINE LAYER CAKE

*Lola Whalen, Project Manager of the Consumer Food Center at Pillsbury, shares this special dessert as one of her favorites. Prep Time: 25 minutes. (Ready in 2 hours 15 minutes)
Makes 16 servings*

For the cake

- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1/4 cup whipping cream
- 1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 3/4 cup coarsely chopped pecans
- 1 (18.25-oz.) package Pillsbury "Moist Supreme Devil's Food Cake Mix"
- 1 1/4 cups water
- 1/3 cup oil
- 3 eggs

Topping

- 1 3/4 cups whipping cream
- 1/4 cup powdered sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon vanilla
- 16 whole pecans, if desired
- 16 chocolate curls, if desired

1. Heat oven to 325 degrees. In a small heavy saucepan, combine butter, 1/4 cup whipping cream and brown sugar. Cook over low heat just until butter is melted, stirring occasionally. Pour into two 9 or 8-inch round cake pans; sprinkle evenly with chopped pecans.

2. In a large bowl, combine cake mix, water, oil and eggs; beat at low speed until moistened. Beat 2 minutes at medium speed. Carefully spoon batter over pecan mixture.

3. Bake in preheated oven for 35-45 minutes or until cake springs back when touched lightly in the center. Cool 5 minutes; remove from pans. Cool 1 hour or until completely cooled.

4. In a small bowl, beat 1 3/4 cups whipping cream until soft peaks form. Add powdered sugar and vanilla; beat until stiff peaks form.

5. To assemble cake, place 1 layer on serving plate, praline side up. Spread with half of whipped cream. Top with second layer, praline side up; spread top with remaining whipped cream. Garnish with whole pecans and chocolate curls, if desired. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

About Face: Face The Sun

Orlane Paris introduces a new sun care range for the face, Soleil Vitamines, an indispensable addition to the exclusive B21 family.

The sun is a natural benefactor that gives us vitality, tone and a healthy glow. Not one to be outdone, the sun can cause intense damage and premature aging with excessive exposure.

Intensive sun-rays encourage the formation of free radicals and new wrinkles. They also cause the skin to become dry. Orlane Laboratories have extensively studied sun-induced damage to the skin. Now they have developed an innovative range of five anti-wrinkle sun products for the face: B21 Soleil Vitamines, suitable for all skin types.

B21 Soleil Vitamines is a vitalizing protection system designed to help fight the formation of wrinkles caused by the sun. The new, exclusive formula combines a potent cocktail of vitamins (A, B1, B2, B5, B12, PP, C, E) with a new complex, Bioprotectyl, which provides outstanding protection for the skin.

Bioprotectyl, extracted from the apple peel, has a protective effect on skin proteins, helping to prevent their deterioration. The cell membranes are the primary target of free radicals. Bioprotectyl traps these free radicals and protects the cell membranes against destruction.

The vitamin complex is composed of:

1. A seaweed extract rich in trace elements, minerals, hydrosoluble vitamins B1, B2 B12, PP, and amino acids combined with vitamins, to rebalance cell metabolism. It boosts hydration and the skin's natural defenses, and helps maintain support structures by enhancing the production of collagen.

2. Vitamins:

Vitamin B5 has a soothing effect

Vitamin A provides anti-wrinkle action

Vitamin E counteracts free radicals

Vitamin C acts on the skin's defense system by reducing the risk of sunburn.

This vitamin complex acts on two levels:

1. as a metabolic regulator, by plumping skin cells and by encouraging intercellular exchanges and the skin's natural defenses;

2. as an activator of cell metabolism, thanks to its rich concentration of vitamins and amino acids, by increasing collagen production, which in turn helps maintain the support structures

The Line:

Anti-wrinkle self tanner for the face SPF 8 - with or without the sun.

Gives an even natural looking glow year round. After vacations, it prolongs the tan and helps counteract the formation of wrinkles. In less than three hours, the skin has an even, golden glow, the skin is hydrated, protected and radiant. 50ml. dispenser bottle retails for $75.

Anti-wrinkle sun serum for the face (no SPF). Prepares...repairs...restores.

A genuine revitalizing "shock treatment" that prepares the skin to withstand the sun before exposure. It neutralizes free radicals and helps counteract the formation of wrinkles. The skin is perfectly prepared, hydrated, revitalized and ready to tan. 30ml dispenser bottle retails for $125.

Anti-wrinkle sun block for the face SPF 30. extreme sun protection:

An absolute weapon against the harmful effects of the sun. It ensures that the most fragile areas of the face are protected and guarantees worry-free sun exposure for even the most sensitive of skins. Perfectly protected and hydrated, the skin gently acquires and even, long-lasting tan without the slightest risk of wrinkles. 15ml. dispenser bottle retails for $75.

Anti-wrinkle sun cream for the face SPF 15-protects...hydrates...vitalizes:

Provides intensive protection while promoting a tan in total safety. it neutralizes free radicals, reinforces the skin's defenses and effectively counteracts the formation of wrinkles. The face acquires a perfect, longer lasting, even tan. The skin is revitalized and can withstand the sun's aggressions. 50ml dispenser bottle retails for $75.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Last week I wrote about the continued dry spell we were having. That situation has changed as we have received over 3 inches of rain this week, with more expected over the weekend. How the worm turns; enough already. Let's save some rain for August!

Speaking of how the worm turns, this has been a historic week of events in our nation's Capitol. Senator Jim Jeffords of Vermont has switched to being an Independent and abandoned the Republican majority in the Senate. The Republicans are now the minority. It will be interesting to see what legislation will be moving during the rest of the 107th Congress. With only a one vote majority, the Democrats will control what legislation advances to the White House. Two weeks ago when I was in Washington, the Washington Post and the Capitol Hill (weekly freebie papers) told of President Bush's anger at Senator Jeffords over his refusal to support the tax reduction package. Senator Jeffords, always an independent thinker, wanted more money for special education funding to implement the American's Disabilities Act which has never been fully funded. At the same time politicians from Wisconsin seized upon the President's unhappiness with Jeffords to press the President not to support an important Dairy Industry legislation, the Dairy Compact, which is important to the entire Northeast States. The administration's putting the Dairy Compact issue out as retaliation for Jeffords not supporting the tax package really further exasperated an already frustrated Senator Jeffords. So it came as no surprise to many political pundits, when Senator Jeffords made his announcement to switch parties. What I find truly historical, is that part of the decision was because of agricultural policy. How about that!

I heard the announcement on the radio as I drove back from a soil conservation meeting in Rochester. Now changing gears a bit, as long as we are talking about conservation and the Senate, both New York Senators Schumer and Clinton are co-sponsors of the Conservation Security Act. The bill establishes a voluntary agricultural conservation policy providing incentive payments to farmers who use environmentally friendly conservation practices on their farmlands. Senator Clinton said, "By offering farmers critical incentives to promote conservation of their land, water, and energy, we will help to protect our beautiful natural resources while helping to fuel our vital farm economy." Since agricultural conservation first became a priority in the 1930's, federal funding for conservation assistance has fallen by 50%. The Conservation Security Act aims to reverse this dangerous trend. As president of the New York State Association of Conservation Districts, I applaud both Senator Schumer and Senator Clinton for their support of stewardship on New York's farms and environment.

Both Farm Bureau and Soil and Water Conservation Districts support a voluntary incentive based approach to stewardship and conservation. Well done Senators! Stay turned.

THE DEEP CLEAN EXPERTS

The Power Of Sears Deep Cleaning ULTRACARE®

Carpet and upholstery dirt is no match for Sears ULTRACARE® System. Two-step cleaning is the secret. First, we loosen dirt with pressurized hot water and advanced cleaning agents. Then we remove cleaning agents and dirt with a clean, pH-balance rinse and a powerful vacuuming. The result – carpet and upholstery that's deep-down clean and soft.

Interior & EXTERIOR

Resale Value

By Susan Simm

As homeowners, the renovation decisions we make today greatly impact the resale values of our homes tomorrow. Increasingly rare is the couple who lives in the same house throughout their adult lives.

Many members of the baby boom generation have either purchased and renovated or built numerous homes by the time they reach their fifties and even then, they may not yet have attained their 'dream house.' Younger couples are buying first homes with an eye toward the next step when they can afford to upgrade. And even retirees consider resale value in the event that they decide to move closer to children or to smaller or assisted accommodations in their later years.

Conclusion? Money spent on renovation projects should be carefully considered so that optimum return on investment can be achieved while also providing maximum comfort for current owners.

First, take emotion out of the equation. Unless you are renovating your dream house and the sky is the limit, examine your options with the same scrutiny you would apply to any investment, such as stocks, mutual funds or CDs. Money strategically invested on renovation can often make the difference between taking a loss on the sale of a home and making a tidy profit.

Next, consult an architect or interior designer if you are considering major alterations. The fee, generally about 10% of the total project, is money well spent if you are not well versed in building codes and practices.

A professional will also 'find space' (converting a closet to a powder room, for example) where you may not have thought to look and thereby save you money in materials and labor.

Finally, but not least important, take a long, hard look at your property's location and resale potential.

home. Unless you plan to renovate and sell, how your renovations affect your day to day living is a top priority.

Looking through magazines and books is a good place to start. Designer showhouses also provide inspiration and are great fun because you are in an actual 'home.' Keep in mind that what you find fun and quirky, others may find too funky and eccentric. While it is certainly OK to use your imagination a little, the next buyer may not understand what you meant by trying to capture Picasso's Blue Period in the master bath. If you hate the mainstream, go for the avant-garde in your choice of furnishings; at least these are portable and most potential buyers can see beyond décor.

If you are planning an addition, such as a second floor or master suite, an architect can really help by maintaining continuity of the home's existing style. For example, if you own a ranch house and want to add a second floor to create more of a colonial style, a good architect can help you avoid the look of two ranches sitting one on top of the other. The extra sum spent here will translate directly to resale value.

The historic value of the property you plan to renovate should also dictate how you proceed. Unless you are remodeling a historically important house, money spent on high-end windows, such as those beautiful Marvin's with the wood dividers, will not be recouped. In fact, window replacement expenses tend to return only about 55% on investment in general.

The best house on the worst street may have gold faucets and chandeliers, but these won't improve the property value.

After considering all of the above and deciding that renovation is for you, think long and hard again, this time about what upgrades will immediately improve your quality of life as well as add resale value to your home. Unless you plan to renovate and sell, how your renovations affect your day to day living is a top priority.

So what are the best renovation investments? Here's a list* meant to serve as a general guide. Much more could be spent on these particular projects: the recovery is based only on the dollar amounts listed.

Renovation	Average Cost	Resale Recovery
Paint	$ 700	200%
Add Bath	10,000	96%
Add Fireplace	4,000	94%
Kitchen Redo (minor)	8,500	79%
Kitchen Redo (major)	24,000	70%
Bath Redo	7,500	69%
Add Skylight	4,000	68%
Add Insulation	1,750	65%
Addition	35,000	62%

New Roof	4,600	61%
Deck	$6,000	60%
Replace Windows	12,000	55%
Swimming Pool	24,000	39%

As you can see, bathrooms and kitchens lead the way, but as a Canadian contracting group provided this list, note the high rate of return on adding insulation and low rate on swimming pools. If you add a high quality 20x40 foot pool with a vinyl liner, brick or slate surround and a little landscaping, you are almost assured of recouping over 75% on your investment here in the tony Hamptons. A little heat never hurts, either, even if this isn't Nova Scotia.

POLICE BLOTTER

One of our writers and editors had a police blotter item erroneously reported in another publication, which related that Joan Zandell, who edits the Montauk Pioneer and the new South of the Highway magazine, was in the Dan's Papers offices when a stone was thrown by an unknown person through a window. Ms. Zandell asserts that she was not stoned at the office but elsewhere.

A Westhampton Beach resident allegedly drove onto the beach at East Quogue, drank three beers, tried to back out and got stuck in the sand. In the process of his difficulties he also tried to dislocate a stop sign, but as he bent it back it sprang up and hit him in the face. He was treated at Central Suffolk Hospital in Riverhead and charged with a DWI, aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and unsafe backing.

Not once, not twice, but three times has a mailbox belonging to an East Hampton resident been vandalized in the past month.

Dig this. East Hampton Town police tipped the Village police about someone digging up protected wildflowers in the vicinity of Stephen Hand's Path. But when an officer was sent to investigate, there was no one to be found.

The residents of a Southampton house had an unpleasant surprise when at 2 a.m. one weekend night a car plowed into their home. The driver, a young man from Texas, had apparently gone off a curve, hit a tree and then gone into the house. The driver was charged with a DWI and speeding.

In Water Mill, some nasty thieves, who had made off with the brass hardware (worth about $200) for the front door of an unoccupied house, tried to add further injury to the dwelling by stopping the bathroom sink and turning on the water. But the water in the house was not on the first place.

Dan's LETTERS

LEGS AND WHEELS

Dear Dan,

First I bring you regards from Dede Gotthelf at the Southampton Inn with whom we're working. I don't know if you've heard that Deborah Blumenthal will be introducing and reading from her latest book Aunt Clair's Yellow Beave Hair, on June 3.

Second, I just noticed your "How Far Does Dan's Papers Travel" question on the masthead page. While I can't be specific, let me remind you that quite some years ago you did a story about your Triumph TR-3. As a fellow former owner of the "widowmakers" I ripped it out and circulated to a half-dozen former TR-3 owners that I used to race with back at about the same time you were...was this your line? Dragging your knuckles on the pavement because of the low cut doors. Dan's got legs and wheels too.

MEET THE WRITERS, WELL MET

Dear Dan,

On behalf of Southampton College and the John Steinbeck Project Steering Committee, I would like to thank you for your participation in and generous support of our 2001 "Meet the Writers" Book Fair.

I am happy to say that we had over 80 authors represented at the Fair. All proceeds from this fundraiser go to the John Steinbeck Project at Long Island University's Southampton College and its writing and library programs.

Again, thank you for your time, patience and continued support.

IT TURNED OUT ALL RIGHT

Dear Dan,

Over and over we read about traveler mishaps and so we thought you would like to hear about a pleasant event.

Twice every year we go out to lunch/dinner with two other couples. We all started as a business relationship, which turned into a friendship which, continued into retirement. This year it was the turn of our Hampton friends to select the restaurant. They selected Gordon's on Main Street in Amagansett. It is one of the top rated restaurants in the Hamptons and difficult to reserve. We were lucky to be able to book six for lunch.

It took us about one and half-hours to drive to the restaurant but we knew it would be worth it. When we entered the restaurant we were the only patrons.

What had happened was that the reservation clerk made a mistake. The restaurant was closed that day for lunch. Somehow she misplaced our friends telephone number and couldn't reach us to advise us of the mistake. We however were not disappointed. To our surprise the staff was waiting for us. Tasim the manager brought everyone in to cook just for us. For two and one half-hours we enjoyed the gourmet cooking. We were not rushed and by the end of the meal had become one of the family. We ask, what other restaurant would do this?

JUST THE FACTS SIR, JUST THE FACTS!

Dear Dan,

In your story War, 5/18/2001, you wrote, "fifty LST landing craft...the kind that JFK captained in the Pacific during WWII". The craft in question was a Torpedo Boat (I believe that's the correct name, it was certainly the right function). I hope this will not mar too much of your record of getting the facts correct.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Face

Anti-wrinkle after-sun balm for the face with vitamin C (no SPF):

Relaxes...rehydrates...reconditions. Enriched with Vitamin C (which fights free radicals, encourages the natural skin defense systems and lowers the risk of sunburn), "After Sun Balm" is your best ally when you return from the beach. It is also ideal for skin that is sensitive and irritated after sun exposure. It reconditions, hydrates and relaxes the skin, helping to prevent the formation of new wrinkles. The face is protected and regains its radiance. Smooth and tanned, the complexion retains all its luminosity. Revitalized, the skin is ready to face the sun again, tomorrow. 50ml glass jar retails for $75.

"So that the Earth may be healed"
Farms, Horse Pastures, Golf Courses, Residential, Commercial, Schools, Churches, Large Acreage or Small, Turf, Trees, Scrubs, Wherever Plants Grow in Soil!!!
Give your landscape a treat. Ten years of research and development is now available for your property and farm. You now have an option for beautiful landscapes and farms without the use of soil destroying fertilizers and toxic chemicals. Organics by neglect is no longer necessary. These Organic products produce the healthiest soil for the healthiest plants that will repel pests and dis-ease. My organic methods are the best for your soils. Call for a consultation today.
